750,000 FARMERS JOIN SHIP PROTEST

Predict Serious Food Shortage Unless Measures Are Taken in Their Behalf

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—The Farmers' National Council, representing 750,000 farmers in eighteen agricultural States, published resolutions today demanding that the United States keep every ship in its mercantile marine.

The resolutions also demand that the nation retain the railroads under government control, and take drastic steps to stop the concentration of the wealth of the country into a few hands.

The resolutions also attacked "the effort being made to restrict the civil liberties of American citizens through the enactment of peace-time sedition laws."

Another clause in the resolutions predicted that a serious food shortage will confront the nation, unless immediate measures are taken in behalf of the farmers, and requests the Senate Committee on Agriculture to take steps to obtain the appointment of a commission to investigate agricultural conditions of the country with a view toward federal insurance of the farmer against loss "from acts of nature over which they have no control."

Concerning ships and the railroads, the resolutions declared:

"We most insistently urge the President and the Congress to cooperate to secure the two-year extension of the government operation of the railroads. We equally and strongly urge the co-operation of the President and the Congress to retain our ships, built with the money subscribed and the taxes paid by millions of workers of the country and not to part with a single ship so constructed which can be used by the United States. The sentiment and the well-nigh universal demand of farmers of the America is:

"'Don't give up the ships.'"

Court Mandate to Shipping Board

Washington, Feb. 14.—The text of Chief Justice McCoy's order on the Shipping Board to show cause why the board should not be enjoined from selling the German ships is as follows:

"Upon consideration of the bill of complaint filed herein, it is this, the thirteenth day of February, 1920, by the court:

"Ordered, That the defendants, John Barton Payne, Thomas A. Scott, John A. McDonald and Raymond B. Stevens, show cause on Monday, February 16, 1920, at 10 o'clock, why they should not be restrained and enjoined from selling the vessels mentioned in paragraph four of the bill of complaint, to wit:

"Arcolus, Agamemnon, American, Amphion, Antigone, Artemis, Black Arrow, De Kalb, Freedom, George Washington, Huron, Leviathan, Madawaska, Martha Washington, Mercury, Mercusin, Mt. Vernon, Nansemond, Otsego, Orion, Powhatan, Pocahontas, Philippines, President Grant, Princess Matoika, Susquehanna, Swanee, Von Steuben, Wyandotte.

"Provided: That the copy of this order be served on the defendants on or before the fourteenth day of February, 1920.

FALLING OFF IN GRIPPE CASES IN BAY STATE

Influenza returns for the last twenty-four hours show a decrease over Friday. One thousand, two hundred and thirty-eight new cases have been reported to the State Department of Health, 196 of which were in Boston. Friday's figures were 1,573 for Massachusetts and 295 for Boston. Dr. Carey said the influenza condition throughout the State showed general improvement. The town of Cunnington, which was hardest hit, has returned to normal. Figures follow for new cases during the last twenty-four hours in six Massachusetts cities: Cambridge 119, Lowell 81, Haverhill 62, Worcester 52, Springfield 47 and Somerville 46.

SACRIFICE OF GREAT FLEET IS BLOCKED

Shipping Board Balked on Proposed Transfer of Vessels to British Interests

Washington, Feb. 14.—A court order applied for by William Randolph Hearst and almost immediately granted by Justice McCoy in the District Supreme Court yesterday afternoon, absolutely will prevent the sale of the former-owned German fleet on Monday morning, at 10 o'clock, as previously planned.

Judge John Barton Payne, chairman, and the other members of the Shipping Board can only go through the prearranged form of receiving bids, upon which no action whatever can be taken until the court proceedings are finally concluded. It is probable even that the hearing at which the bids were to be opened will now have to be postponed by the Shipping Board.

It was apparent from the attitude of the Shipping Board officials today that the action of the court came in the nick of time, possibly, to save the ships from passing into the hands of private interests.

The restraining order was granted

Charge Nurse Robbed Wealthy Patient

MRS. DELLA WORKMAN.

Amesbury, Feb. 14.—Charged with robbing her wealthy patient, Mrs. Della Workman, a nurse, well known socially here and in Haverhill, has been taken to the Essex county jail in Lawrence pending her arraignment Monday.

She will plead to an indictment in four counts, of larceny from Mrs. Mary Tuck of No. 119 Friend street, this town, a widow reputed to be wealthy until her fortune was found to be greatly depleted through alleged mishandling.

Mrs. Workman, who maintains a cottage at Salisbury Beach and has entertained there lavishly, showed no surprise at her arrest, the police say. She was taken into custody at Warner, N. H.

According to the charge, Mrs. Workman secured a position as companion to Mrs. Mary Tuck, and did all the buying for the household, paying with blank checks signed by the widow. Mrs. Workman is alleged to have raised these sums and destroyed the canceled checks on their return.

MURDERED AND CAST IN POND

Slayers of Milford Man Bound His Feet, Hands and Face Before Beating Him to Death

Milford, Feb. 14.—Evidence of a brutal murder carefully planned came to light here today, with the finding of the body of an unidentified man floating on the surface of Round Pond.

The victim's feet were bound with telephone wire. His hands were also tied, and cloth bandages were wound about his mouth, eyes and nose.

The preliminary examination of the body indicated that death had been caused by beating or strangling, and the body then thrown into the water.

Indications were that the body had been in the water for weeks. It floated about 150 feet from shore when discovered.

The unidentified victim was about fifty years old and fairly well dressed in a suit of dark clothes. He was about five feet eight inches in height, and weighed 160 pounds.

The place where he was found is close to several factories, but it is not believed that the man was a factory hand.

The local authorities are being assisted in their investigation by State Police Officers Edward J. McCarthy and Robert E. Melt of Worcester.

HOSEMAN COOK OF CHARLESTOWN HURT

Thomas W. Cook, a hoseman attacher to Fire Engine No. 50, Charlestown, was injured when thrown from the engine, responding to an alarm from a garage owned by William J. 'SKY THE LIMIT FOR FUEL'

New England Director Finds Foreign Governments Are Bidding High for Coal

The greatest coal famine in history, with dealers in this country forced to bid against foreign governments, today was predicted by James J. Storrow, local fuel administrator.

Mr. Storrow, who had just returned from Washington, declared that this famine would occur after the signing of the peace treaty, which would automatically lift all wartime measures restricting exportation.

He said that Washington was swamming with representatives of foreign nations clamoring for coal and willing to pay bonuses in addition to the extra $7.35 a ton allowed the mine operators for export.

HINES REASSURES COOLIDGE.

At the same time Governor Coolidge received a telegram from Walker D. Hines, Director-General of Railroads, assuring him that New England would be cared for in the matter of fuel.

Mr. Storrow said, in part:

"The operator now receives $1.79 for coal at the mines. This price was fixed by President Wilson through Harry A. Garfield, former fuel administrator. At the same time Dr. Garfield promulgated an order by which coal can be exported and the operator allowed an additional $1.56.

"In other words, the operator gets $1.35 more for export than for domestic trade. With all restrictions removed, it is natural to believe that he would be inclined to sell his product where he could get the most money. When the price was fixed,

BAKER MAY SUCCEED LANSING

General Reorganization of the Cabinet Expected to Follow State Secretary's Departure

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 14.—Today the capital is on tip-toe over the sensational resignation of Secretary of State Robert Lansing and rumors of further changes in the Cabinet.

Secretary of War Baker is mentioned as a possible successor to Secretary Lansing, this being in line of promotion. No one ventures to suggest who might succeed Baker in the War Department.

Many here recall that as early as last September it was rumored that President Wilson would completely reorganize his cabinet and those close to the President declare that he virtually calling for Secretary Lansing's resignation at this time and accepting it immediately he was but carrying out an intention of long standing.

At the request of Senator Brandegee, Republican, of Connecticut, the correspondence between the President and the Secretary was today ordered printed in the Congressional Record.

At the White House the silence of the tomb is observed on this subject. Beyond saying that no further resignations are to be accepted the President declines to discuss the matter.

HEARST INJUNCTION ABSOLUTELY PREVENTS SALE OF SHIPS MONDAY

COURT ORDER IS SERVED UPON THE SHIPPING BOARD

by Justice McCoy only after he had made a careful perusal of the prima facie evidence submitted by Hearst's counsel in the bill of complaint.

Following the action by Justice McCoy, the court served formal notice on the members of the Shipping Board, as defendants named in the bill of complaint, that they must show cause on Monday morning why they should not be enjoined from selling the former German fleet.

When newspaper correspondents saw Judge Payne at a conference later the chairman of the Shipping Board disclaimed the former court order, which already had been served upon him. The other members of the board also had been served.

PAYNE ISSUES STATEMENT.

Chairman Payne, shortly after being served by the court, issued the following formal statement to the press:

"The board will, of course, pay the utmost respect to any action of the court. Since the law has granted the power to sell ships to the board it is probable that when the court is placed in possession of the facts, in order to show cause will be set aside.

"I have not seen the complaint which Mr. Hearst has filed and, of course make no comment. It would be a public calamity, after these were receiving the proposed sale had been in the press for days with the statement that the board next at 10 o'clock we would have a public auction sale at the office of the board and then sell the ships, and everyone, including our critics, invited to attend.

"Yours, with great respect,

(Signed) "JOHN BARTON PAYNE,
Chairman."

ADMITS "DUMMY" ANGLE.

Judge Payne was asked whether he had taken any precautions to prevent the possibility of a "dummy" sale, which would have permitted the ships to be bought by purchasers who would later transfer them to other interests. Judge Payne said that he had taken no such precautions.

"We have no suspicion that any of the companies are 'dummies' or that the bids are not made in good faith," he declared.

It was tacitly admitted by Shipping Board officials that the "opposition" had scored in preventing the sale of ships being rushed through on Monday.

A special meeting of the entire list of members of the board of review was called last night by Chairman Payne. The chairman admitted that the purpose of calling the meeting was to "consider the action of the District Supreme Court today."

It is understood that counsel representing the board was present at the closed meeting last night with a view to devising ways and means of answering the legal action of the "opposition."

Legislators Brand Sale as Betrayal of U. S.

State Senators and members of the House of Representatives have added their voices to the storm of protest raised by the proposed sale of the fleet of former German steamships by the United States Shipping Board to British interests through the Mercantile Merchant Marine.

They brand the contemplated transfer of the liners as "exactly such conspiracy" to rob the government and an outrage which should be thoroughly investigated by Congress. Following are the statements of a number of the members of the General Court:

ROBERT E. DIGNEY, Representative 9th Suffolk District—The policy for the American public could be greater than the sale of the ships to the agents of a foreign government or to any agency which might employ these same ships in competition against us for the trade of the world. American needs these ships. We should keep them and operate them under governament supervision.

JAMES E. CURRY, Representative, Cambridge—"As an ex-service man I wish to protest against the proposed sale of the 110 seized United Shipping Board to sell the German merchant fleet taken by us in the great war. I further protest at a time when the United States needed ships the present is surely the time.

GEORGE D. CHAMBERLAIN, State Senator, Hyde Park District—It would seem to be no question as to what should be done with these ships. Hold them until such time as they can be disposed of at the nearest approach to their value. The extravagance of the present administration is something astounding. The household treasuries in every city and town are multiplying with frightful rapidity. How long, O Lord, how long?

LOUIS ORENBERG, Representative of the Fifth Suffolk District—As a former service man and as a citizen of Boston who was familiar with the seized German ships at this port, I wish to protest against the sale or transfer of them to any agency. The government never should part with ships of that kind. I am glad the American people has thrown its influence against this un-American proposition.

CORNELIUS J. DRISCOLL, Democratic Representative, Boston—At the completion of our great three months of service in the 26th, 3d and 39th Divisions in France and Germany, I returned to my home in Dorchester. It would be outrageous to sell such a ship as the Leviathan, or any other ship, to the British government.

JAMES J. CANTON, member of Dorchester Legion Post—Why should any man be vested with the power to sell a fleet of ships? Let our representatives in Congress and the Senate decide our policies. Then everything will be insured a permanent peace.

JOSEPH E. KIND, Representative, Springfield—I oppose the sale of any part of our merchant marine to a foreign power and am of the opinion that President Wilson should hold up the transfer of merchant ships to England. Your stand in this matter is well taken, as the sale of our ships at one-third their real value is outrageous. Our government can and should operate a merchant marine or deliver ships to American citizens.

L. ADELARD BREAULT, Representative, Boston—I believe that President Wilson should prevent the sale of the German ships taken by us during the war. I further believe that the ships proposed for sale to the International Merchant Marine should be owned by the government and operated under the direction of the United States Shipping Board.

GEORGE H. NEWHALL, Representative, Fourteenth Essex District—I do not know the whole facts in the case, but from what I do know I should say keep them, if we can use them, and I think we can.

COLONEL DALTON L. YOUNG, former Lieutenant Governor of Rhode Island—I see no wisdom in disposing of the German ships at a price one-third of their value and hope the President will hold up the sale until the matter can be investigated. Why the unseemly rush and why so many favors on the part of the United States Shipping Board. Twenty-eight ships to be sold next at 10 o'clock we would have a public auction sale at the office of the board and then sell the ships, and everyone, including our critics, invited to attend.

"Yours, with great respect,

(Signed) "JOHN BARTON PAYNE,

I appeal to the members of Congress to use their influence with President Wilson to halt the proposed sale on Monday of thirty former German ships.

Further, I petition that there be a most thorough and full investigation of every important fact covering the proposed sale. This investigation should most thoroughly probe the report that the Shipping Board plans to sell these ships, including some of the largest and finest steamships afloat, for $28,000,000, which is declared to be but one-third of their real value.

I desire to ask why cannot the government itself operate these fine ships rather than sacrifice two-thirds of their value?

Bunker Hill Post, A. L., Opposed to Ship Sale

Resolutions of protest against the sale of any former German ships were passed at a meeting of Bunker Hill Post, A. L. The organization of more than 3,300 former service men believes such action would place the future interests of this country at stake. Copies of the resolution are sent to President Wilson and to the Senators and Congressman.

TIMOTHY J. DRISCOLL, Representative, Boston—I am absolutely opposed to the sale of the ships to an English firm. The development of our own merchant marine demands that we keep them. To would be a violation of the rights of American citizens to dispose of the ships.

JAMES A. MOYNIHAN, Representative, Boston — Am unalterably opposed to sale of ships. It is unpatriotic, unfair and indefensible from any consideration. We of Boston who glory in our past supremacy of the seas particularly resent even the suggestion of such action.

FRANCIS J. FINNERAN, Treasurer Democratic Club of Massachusetts—William Randolph Hearst, who has led several great fights for the American public for the preservation of the American government, is to be lauded for this great stand he has taken for the salvation of the American merchant marine.

EDWARD A. SCIGLIANO, Representative—I am opposed to the sale of the ships. We should build up our own commercial fleet. There is no adequate reason to give ships to other nations to compete with us for trade. With men, the principle is "America first."

WILLIAM W. OLLENDORF, Boston—President should stop sale of former German fleet. This country needs all shipping facilities possible for expansion of trade. Action, however, is in keeping with the inefficiency of present administration.

HARVEY E. FROST, Representative, Somerville—Are there any other American or foreign concerns that will pay more than the International Company? The government should go out of all private business as soon as possible.

CHAUNCY PEPIN, Representative, of Salem—I believe if sold they should be sold to companies that would hold them under American registry. It is also a shame to sell them at the sacrifice ridiculously low.

DANIEL J. GILLEN, Representative, of Boston—America should keep the ships. I have no other flag than the Stars and Stripes will fly over them.

M. BESSETTE, Representative, Boston:

The ships should not be sold.

PREDICTS GREAT COAL FAMINE

Domestic Dealers Must Bid Against Foreigners, Storrow Learns at Capital

however, the administration made a ruling allowing only certain quantities of coal to go out of the country.

"SKY WILL BE THE LIMIT."

"When the Peace Treaty is signed these wartime regulations will automatically go out of existence and then there will be a wild scramble, a cat and dog fight, to obtain coal, with the United States and New England in particular pitted on one side against all foreign governments on the other.

"As for prices, the sky will be the limit.

"I had supposed that something would be tacked on the railroad bill which would prevent coal from getting away from us. When the railroads are turned back to private owners, at least half of the coal mined may go abroad. New England and the entire country will then face the greatest coal famine in history.

"European nations and South American countries are all anxious to get our coal. Ninety per cent. of the mine operators have contracts which run from April to April, so that unless some action is taken the deluge will be upon us. I do not care to make any suggestions, as that is a matter of statesmanship. However, I will say that March is the biggest coal month in the year, and as the railroads go back to their owners on the first of April, we expect to pay more for fuel after that time.

GOT "FINE PROMISES."

"Personally, I do not believe that the present shortage in New England has been relieved, even by the amount turned over by the Central Coal Committee. Seventy thousand tons is in reality only a few days supply for this section.

"I was received with the greatest courtesy by H. B. Spencer, chairman, and members of the central coal committee. I also received fine promises, but experience has taught me that continual pressure must be applied. We must work hard from now to April 1 or we're sunk."

On Monday a conference of New England governors will be held at the State House, at which Governor Coolidge will preside. The coal situation will be discussed, and a plan on which Mr. Storrow is working will be taken up.

Lewis Says Wilson Is to Aid Ireland

Chicago, Feb. 14—President Wilson will present the rights of Ireland to self-determination to the League of Nations as soon as the United States qualifies as a member, if he is President at the time, former James Hamilton Lewis told the Irish Fellowship Club today.

The former Democratic whip was the principal speaker at the club's luncheon and took for his subject a defense of the President against the attacks of Irish citizens concerning his position on the Irish question.

SAW BURKE NEAR DEATH SPOT

Woodsman Also Heard Shots; Accused Man Told Them He Was Hunting

Skowhegan, Me., Feb. 14—Two government witnesses testified today that John A. Burke, charged with murdering his partner and friend, Nelson W. Bartley, was in the woods within 25 yards of the spot where Bartley's body was found three days before the Mouse River House proprietor disappeared.

Through these witnesses, and others to follow, the State endeavors to show that the murder of the Jackman hotel keeper was carefully planned.

Perley Crook and Ernest Stewart, woodsmen, testified that they met Burke in Sugar Berth woods on the Sunday afternoon previous to the Wednesday evening that Bartley was last seen alive, in company with the accused. Crook said he was again in the woods on the following Wednesday night and heard three or four revolver shots at about 9 o'clock. This was the time the government declares Bartley was murdered.

When we met Burke he told us that he was on a tram began at 10 o'clock with an opening chorus. road to go into the woods after some birds," said Mr. Crook.

Stewart asked him where his gun was, but he did not answer."

INSIDE STORY OF FIRST CABINET MEETING CALLED BY LANSING

GRAYSON BROKE UP SESSION

Said to Have Been Held to Determine Wilson's Condition; Questions by President

New York, Feb. 14.—The New York Evening Sun today printed the following:

From our occasional correspondent.

Washington, Feb. 14.—The story of the first of the informal Cabinet meetings called by Secretary Lansing while the President was ill and of the President's apparent displeasure because of it, comes to light today, as a result of the resignation of the Secretary of State.

Shortly after the President had returned from his western trip, ill, the members of the Cabinet were called together by Secretary Lansing.

The fact that Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the President's personal physician, had been invited to attend the meeting indicated that it was called for the purpose of determining the condition of the sick patient.

President Wilson was not informed of the plans for the conference until Admiral Grayson, sensing its purpose, told the President of it and told him also that he expected to be questioned regarding the health and condition of his patient.

PUT TWO QUESTIONS

"As for my physical condition," the President is said to have told him, "you are best fitted to report. As for indication of my mental condition, however, tell them that I asked you to ask them these two questions:

"By what authority and for what purpose was the meeting called?

"What do the Cabinet members expect to get out of it?"

Accordingly, Admiral Grayson went to the meeting. When he arrived he found every chair except the one usually occupied by the President filled. Being an invitation he waited, he reported briefly in answer to a question by Secretary Lansing regarding the President's physical condition. Then he told of the two questions he had been asked to bring to the meeting.

BROKE UP THE MEETING.

The Cabinet members were astonished and startled. For some moments there was a painful pause. Then Secretary Lane put in:

"We want to do what is best for the President and the country."

He was interrupted by Secretary Daniels, who launched into a highly emotional and fervent declaration of his devotion to Woodrow Wilson, and the meeting broke up with little accomplished and the two questions unanswered.

It is significant that Secretary Lane, the only Cabinet member who sought to explain the purpose of the meeting and to defend it, has since tendered his resignation, to take effect March 1. He had apparently been consulted by Secretary Lansing before the meeting was called.

New York Papers Express Sympathy With Lansing

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 14.—Editorial comment in New York on the resignation under dramatic circumstances of Secretary of State Lansing was confined to the Times and World, both of which have been consistent supporters of the administration.

The World said:

"Secretary Lansing's resignation is even more emphatic than the Hon. Bryan's for, in addition to the sudden retirement itself, there is the significant fact that the resignation was asked for by most bewildering circumstances.

"The case of unexpected action made by the President against the Secretary of State is without precedent in the history of the country. Public sympathy and the country will not rest satisfied with the cryptic correspondence between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lansing. There will be a general demand for a full statement as to reasons for the President's extraordinary action."

The Times, after going at length into the action of the Secretary in calling Cabinet meetings, said:

"Had the Constitution suffered injury from the course he has pursued? Has the structure of government been weakened or impaired? We cannot believe it. . . . The public sympathy, we feel sure, will be given to Mr. Lansing in a very considerable degree. From any point of view it is a regrettable incident."

WILSON PLANS MORE CHANGES

Baker May Succeed Lansing as Secretary of State in Cabinet Shakeup

nations from the Cabinet were expected and that the President, up to yesterday, had not decided upon the successor to Secretary Lansing. Secretary Joseph P. Tumulty had little to offer when he met a crowd full of eager questioning correspondence gathered from all parts of the country.

At the State Department Acting Secretary of State Frank Polk met the newspapermen, but refused to comment upon the exchange of correspondence between Secretary of State Lansing and President Wilson. He stated, however, that by law he automatically became acting Secretary of State for forty days following a resignation of the Secretary.

Acting Secretary Polk further declared that he had informed the foreign diplomatic corps of Secretary Lansing's resignation. Everywhere one encounters the same atmosphere of suppressed excitement. In political circles many profess to feel no surprise over the President's action, having been aware for months that he and his ranking secretary were not in closest accord.

Nevertheless seven these seem to sense a certain acrimony in the letters of the President and Secretary Lansing unprecedented in the interchang of communications between members of the official family.

The President, it was said at the White House today, would very soon issue a call for a cabinet meeting, and when the meeting took place he would preside in person. This he has not done since he was stricken late in September. He will have about the big table in the cabinet room of the executive mansion almost a brand new cabinet, only five of the total of ten members remaining in the positions they have left them when they last sat in the same room together.

Those to go are Secretary Lansing, Burlson, Daniels, Wilson and Baker. There will be others there who were members of his cabinet last Fall, but these have been switched to other departments.

Dismissal Creates a Sensation in London

By International News Service.

London, Feb. 14.—The resignation of Secretary Lansing under spectacular circumstances created a veritable sensation in British government circles. It is the chief morsel of conversation and comment today in political quarters. Speculation is rife as to what effect the dramatic ousting of the secretary will have politically and internationally.

Every London paper today displayed the news in large type, with streamers clear across the tops of the front pages. Columns on the front pages were devoted to the dispatches and supplemented with "inside stuff" observed during the peace conference at Paris. The Star and Evening News both devoted a great amount of space to the dispatches.

"A. U. S. A. Political Sensation" was the headline, printed in large type, with which the Standard carried over its Washington story. This newspaper devoted nearly half of its first page to Secretary Lansing's resignation.

The Pall Mall Gazette and the Globe were content with the first page to the Lansing story. The former called it a "Washington sensation," the latter a "United States political bombshell."

Col. House Declines to Comment on Clash

New York, Feb. 14.—Declaring that both men were his friends, Colonel E. M. House today declined to make any comment on the clash between President Wilson and Secretary of State Lansing which resulted in the latter's resignation.

"I have never had a disagreeable difference with either of them in the many years we worked together," Mr. House said. "Both have shown me much consideration and friendship under all circumstances at all times."

Informal Meetings of Cabinet Common in Past

By International News Service

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 14.—"Informal Cabinet meetings," the calling of which was one of the reasons assigned by the President for accepting Secretary Lansing's resignation, have been common in other administrations, it was declared here today by John W. Griggs, attorney-general in McKinley's Cabinet.

"Secretary Lansing did not usurp any powers in calling the Cabinet together," said Mr. Griggs. "Such meetings were common in President McKinley's administration. The Cabinet is only an informal group of departmental heads acting as advisers to the President."

Dismissal Comment on Dismissal of Lansing

The Boston Globe says:

"Some will see in the extraordinary frankness of the correspondence between Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lansing the querulousness of a sick man. To others it will be a sign of convalescence, that the President is so gaining in strength as to wish to move the furniture about. But whatever the reason for the plain speaking in these letters, they reveal a real conflict of political opinion."

"This difference was noticeable in the tone of Mr. Lansing's public speeches during the war. When President and Secretary went to Paris, the same difference, even conflict, of opinion was noted by the correspondents again and again. . . .

"In such a conflict, the President on one side, his subordinate on the other, it is to the public interest that one should go. The one to go is not the President."

The Herald says:

"Public sympathy is likely to be largely with Mr. Lansing unless later developments shall throw light on the difference that led to his sudden departure from Mr. Wilson's official family. Somebody had to go ahead and do things during the intervals of the President, which is now admitted.

"If Cabinet meetings were called without the President's knowledge during the earlier part of his illness, how much else was done and is being done in his name? And by whom?

"The episode reveals—to any who may have doubted it—the tremendous handicap under which the country has been laboring in recent months, both in the administration of its troubled internal affairs and in its peculiarly complicated international relations, through having in the White House a man too sick to perform the duties of his office."

Unfair and Unjust, Says Philadelphia Bulletin

Philadelphia, Feb. 14.—The Bulletin, in commenting today upon the Lansing-Wilson breach, declared the rupture dated back to the "Subordination of the secretary to Colonel House in the councils at Paris," adding that the secretary's dismissal was unfair, unjust and an "extraordinary course to be pursued by the President."

BRITISH FORCING DRUG EVIL HERE

Exports Enormous Stores of Opium to U. S., Says Dr. Copeland

New York, Feb. 14.—Great Britain is openly charged with not alone trafficking in human souls through her monopoly of the world's opium trade, but with having purposely forced the opium curse on America. Such was the keynote of an address by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, who denounced England's attitude as "a crime against decency."

Speaking before the New York Association of Magistrates, Dr. Copeland said:

"The finger of blame rests most now be pointed at the British government, because the opium business is a British government monopoly and the great international offender in the shipment to England."

He revealed that during the first ten months of 1919 no less than 584,000 pounds of opium had been imported into this country, and only a few pounds were used for medicine.

Recently China, successful in stopping England from importing this curse, has ceased.

"With the driving of opium out of China, British opium officials must look to other fields and it is apparent that the United States has been purposely selected as the most fruitful one. It is not surprising to learn that in 1918, 2,400 chests of opium were imported into the United States, and that the first ten months of 1919 the number of chests increased to 640,000 pounds. Thus the United States is absorbing practically the same amount of opium that was formerly shipped to China."

BOSTON BROKER IS SUSPENDED

Arthur W. Hale, in Exchange 32 Years, Unable to Meet His Obligations

Arthur W. Hale, member of the Boston Stock Exchange for the past thirty-two years, announced today that he was unable to meet his financial obligations.

Subsequently it was given out from the rostrum of the Stock Exchange that Mr. Hale had been suspended.

Hale was caught in the heavy market crash of the past few weeks, according to members of the exchange.

Most of Hale & Company's business, it was stated, was in trading—buying and selling for other brokers on a commission basis.

A long period of depression in stocks in which he dealt was the reason given by Hale for his suspension. He grew up in State street, having entered the financial centre as a messenger when 15 years old.

In the weathering of the financial storm since going in business, including the panics of 1893 and 1907, Hale said, "but the present situation was too much for me.

"The year and lack of opportunity for trading since then were the principal factors."

Recently after his suspension was not a complete surprise, I had hoped to avert it. I am fifty-two years old, in good health, and I believe I shall be able to regain my position.

"I have no statement to make at this time how my customers will be taken care of. Neither can I say what is the condition of their accounts or what their losses will be. I may assign my assets to them or I may take each account up separately in a friendly way."

Hale did business under the name of Hale & Co. His activity was principally in railroad stocks and realty issues.

Light Snow Sunday Is Probable

Although storm-weary Boston welcomed fair skies today, the weather man dashed hopes of a final clearing-up with the forecast for an unsettled Sunday and probably light snow. The temperature tomorrow is expected to change but little, although it may be slightly warmer during the day and colder again at night. The winds will be light southerly to westerly.

Zero weather today prevailed in much of the West, extending as far south as Texas. Extremes of temperatures were 22 degrees below zero at Moorehead, Minn., 74 at Key West, Fla., 25 at Northfield, Vt., 32 at Nantucket, Boston was 29 degrees at 7 a. m. and 34 at 10.

NO ESCORT FOR PERSHING

General to Make His Inspection Trips With Officers of Own Staff

General John J. Pershing will arrive in Boston February 25 in a special car and will remain in it with his staff officers until 8 a. m., when he will begin his trip of inspection to the Watertown Arsenal. He has sent word that he does not want to be accompanied by any officers of the Northeastern Department as he proposes to make this inspection with his own staff officers.

Upon his return from the arsenal, Major-General C. R. Edwards will tender him a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza, where he will talk over matters bearing upon the interests of the Northeastern Department.

According to Mr. Cameron Forbes, chairman of the reception committee, nothing definite has been arranged for the entertainment of General Pershing. Major Peters will give him a dinner in the Copley-Plaza on the evening of February 25. General Pershing has sent instructions to General Edwards that he will not visit army headquarters. He insists in his orders that no officers of the Department will be called on him or escort him upon his tour of inspection of Camp Devens, on February 26.

Mayor Peters announces the appointment of a reception committee at the dinner given by the city to General Pershing at the Copley-Plaza. This committee will co-operate with the committee appointed by Governor Coolidge. It is composed of C. F. Weed, chairman; Nunzio Scarpaci, Judge A. K. Cohen, Henry V. Cunningham, J. Albert Dorsey and Arthur D. Hill.

Y. M. H. A. $100,000 DRIVE IS EXTENDED

The Young Men's Hebrew Association drive for $100,000, which was originally to close at noon, but a rest Monday night, has been extended all through next week. Even though less than half of the money sought has been subscribed, yet the committee is confident that they will raise the full amount next week.

Treasurer Lebowich last evening announced the scene of the larger subscriptions. They follow:

Lazarus Agoos, $5,000; Y. M. H. A. Boys' Clubs, $1,000; Max Shoolman, $1,000; Max Mitchell, $1,000; Solomon Agoos, $1,000; Simon Sieve, $1,000; Ruben Broomfield, $500; A) A. Rosenbush, $500; Peerless Petticoat Company, $400.

ELOPER GOES HOME TO MAINE WITH FATHER

Danvers, Feb. 14.—Olive Robinson, the 16-year-old daughter of Benjamin Mc-Girl who eloped with William Henry Collins, colored, Canadian war veteran, is now in the custody of her father, Frank Robinson, bound over for home today. The police are still searching for Collins, who is wanted on a serious charge.

The girl was found at the home of Collins' brother, Frank, here. She told her father that Collins had behaved "like a perfect gentleman." He went to Boston and secured a marriage license, which, giving true names and facts, except that he gave her age as eighteen. While in Boston he met Miss Mary Wright, who had a story that he had violated the Mann Act in bringing her here, and becoming engaged to her herself, leaving her at his brother's home.

S. P. MANDELL IS DEAD

President of the Boston Transcript Company Was Ill Two Weeks

Samuel Pierce Mandell, president of the Boston Transcript Company, and who, until a few months ago, was actively associated with the old time dry goods house of C. F. Hovey & Co., died at noon today at his home at No. 303 Commonwealth avenue, where he had been ill during the past fortnight.

Seventy-two years of Mr. Mandell's life were spent in the C. F. Hovey & Co., terminating with the reorganization of that concern last Summer, when he and his partner, Edward C. Johnson, sold their interests.

Mr. Mandell entered the firm March 1, 1868. Working up, he soon became a commanding influence in its destiny, being made a member of the firm in 1877.

In 1875 he was called as one of the executors of the founder, Henry Worthington Dutton, into the Boston Transcript, and was active in the organization of the present company, a few years later, he became its president.

Mr. Mandell was born in West Bridgewater on August 12, 1833, and was the son of Moses and Ann (Pierce) Mandell.

On November 14, 1860, he married Miss Ann E. Dutton of Boston, daughter of Henry Worthington Dutton, founder of the Transcript, and Ann Maria Dutton, at his residence on January 26, 1918, in her eighty-sixth year. Mrs. Mandell is survived by a son, George S. Mandell, also connected with the Transcript, and by six grandchildren, who are: Mrs. Nell W. Rice (Emma N. Mandell), Thomas F. Rice, Miss James P. Mandell, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Geo. S. Mandell, Miss Ann Rackemann, formerly Miss Dorothy Mandell and now the wife of Dr. Francis M. Rackemann; Miss Julianne Mandell and Winthrop P. Mandell, the children of the late William D. Mandell, who died in 1918, and who was also with his father as partner in C. F. Hovey & Co., and four great-grandchildren.

Another grandson was Samuel R. Mandell, who died in the late summer while flying over the German lines.

ABANDONED BABY FOUND IN CHURCH

Lawrence, Feb. 14.—The police are seeking the parents of a three-weeks-old baby boy found in St. Mary's Church, where it was left abandoned in a pew. When found it was wrapped in a dark brown woolen mixture blanket. The child was found by the church sexton and turned over to the Protection of Mary Immaculate (temporarily).

SUFFRAGISTS IN NEW LEAGUE

Work of Merging With Women Voters Begun at Chicago Convention

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Suffrage workers gathered here for the victory convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association at today's session, began the work of merging its membership into that of the League of Women Voters, which it was decided will supersede the association.

When the Federal amendment ratifies the Federal suffrage amendment, the association will pass out of existence.

According to the merger plans, activities of the association are to retain their identity through a new board of directors to be elected at the convention, but they will change their names, objects and constitutions to conform with those of the League of Women Voters.

The league was considered today.

According to some of the Chicago workers a plan for reorganization of the league "the first duty of the league for 1920 the political education of the new women voters (but not excluding men)." The interpretation, the resolution recommends, should be begun in primary schools and continued throughout the university courses.

As a beginning in scholastic instruction the wielding of the ballot the convention voted to establish a department and chair of politics at Bryn Mawr College. This will be a memorial to Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.

DENY CRITICISM OF VAHEY BY COURT

Attorney James H. Vahey and Judge Sullivan of the Charlestown Court today denied that the lawyer was criticised by the court in the case of Charles Murphy of Somerville, as reported in the American yesterday. According to the American's story the attorney charged that his client was "framed," and the court characterized this charge as "ridiculous and uncalled for." The court and the attorney are in accord that these things did not tanspire.

BOSTON AMERICAN LIMERICK CONTEST $250 EVERY DAY

For the Best Last Lines

Mrs. Abbie A. Nickerson

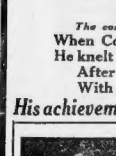
147 Clifton Street, Malden, Mass.,

will be paid $150 for the "best last line" of

LIMERICK No. 8

The completed limerick reads as follows:

When Columbus arrived in our land,
He knelt on San Salvador's sand,
After fighting the seas
With storm and with breeze,
His achievement was more than he planned.



Mrs. Abbie A. Nickerson is a resident of 147 Clifton street, Malden, where she has resided for many years. She is the wife of Frederick O. Nickerson, prominent Malden resident. She is actively interested in church and women's clubs.

"We have worked every night on the Boston American limericks," she said. "Both my husband and myself like to puzzle them out, and we enjoy finding last lines. Some nights we have worked over them until after 11 o'clock. We were just working out tonight's limerick when notified of my good fortune in winning the prize. I usually think up a number of lines, and then I select the best one."

4 next "best last lines" of No. 8 Limerick were written by

THOMAS F. REDMOND, 37 Ericsson St., Cambridge, Mass.
MARGARET MacPHEE, Boothby Surgical Hospital, 3 Worcester Sq., Boston, Mass.

NEW ARBITRATION BOARD TO SETTLE ALL BASEBALL DISPUTES

MAGNATES IN PEACE MOVE

Outsider to Decide Action in Case of Deadlock; Commission Head on Board

Chicago, Feb. 14.—The chairman of the National Commission and a representative to be selected by the minor leagues will sit in judgment on all disputes arising between the big and little leagues of baseball, according to an agreement reached at the meeting here. A third man, not in any way connected with baseball and to be named by the other two members of the newly-formed board, will have the power of casting the deciding vote in case of a deadlock between the two baseball members.

The new body will likely be known as the Baseball Arbitration Board of America, a name suggested by President Heydler of the National League.

Ratification of the action of their representatives by the clubs of the two big leagues is necessary to make the new agreement binding, but no trouble on this score is anticipated. Possibly final disposition of the agreement will not be made until settlement of the suit of the Baltimore Federal League Club against organized baseball has been affected. It is known that several of the American League magnates as well as some prominently identified with the minor league are averse to taking up any new burdens until present loads are got rid of.

VARSITY'S TURN COMES TONIGHT

Sherbrooke Team Far from Being Up to Standard of Former Canadian Outfits

PAVILION LINEUP.

HARVARD.		SHERBROOKE.
Brown, lw.		lw., Cotter
Bigelow, c.		c., Baker
Emmons, rw.		lw., Conley
Walker, cp.		cp., Cowling
Stubbs, p.		p., Atto
Holmes, g.		g., Arguin

Tonight the Harvard varsity hockey sextet will endeavor to do as well or better than their game against the Sherbrooke (Que.) team at the Boston Club did in the last game played at the Ice Pavilion, and if the latter does not transform many new hockey followers will find themselves outguessed, for the Canadian team, except for Pop Conley, is far from being the brilliant array of years gone by.

As with the majority of Canadian teams individual play is the keynote of its style, and the Wanzer system of hockey sort of eats up that type of play.

The Harvard varsity-Sherbrooke contest will be followed by the annual clash of the Crimson and Yale yearlings. The last meeting of freshmen representatives of these two universities found Yale topping Harvard by a 9 to 1 score, and the Harvard freshmen wait revenge — large, luscious gobs of it—revenge, and tonight's the night they expect to get it.

Harvard Club Wins by Rally in Last Period

Traff Hicks of the Harvard Club hockey sextet played up to his old standard when that aggregation encountered Pop Conley's Sherbrooke team, and his best made up considerably for the temporary absence of George Percy and Bobby Brightcute considerably, for the Harvard Club, after trailing for two periods, ran up four successive goals in the final session and thereby topped Sherbrooke's best efforts, 7 to 6.

Hicks of the Harvard Club and Conley of the Sherbrookes each accounted for four goals in the course of the play, and their play, together with that of Gus Doty and Bob Stillman of the Harvard Club and Goal Arguin of the Sherbrooke team furnished the features of the evening.

Until the final few minutes of the second period few of the spectators believed the locals had a chance of winning for three goals by Conley and one each by Parker and Baker of the Canadian array, against a lone Harvard Club tally by Doty gave the Canadians a 5 to 1 advantage. Before the second period had ended, however, Hicks tallied twice and goals by Baldwin, Hicks, Phillips and Hicks again switched the advantage 7 to 6 in the Harvard Club's favor. Conley scored Sherbrooke's final tally shortly before the game ended.

BOSTON ALL-STARS CONQUER PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, Feb. 14.—The Boston All-Stars defeated the Pittsburg A. A. hockey team, 4 to 3, in an elimination playing game at the Duquesne Gardens rink.

The game was rough, with the Pittsburgh players the offenders most of the time. Manners, Nagle and Murry were ruled twice for "roughness." Synnott, Downing and Small drew a five-minutes penalty for illegal checking.

"TWO AND THREE"

SNOW, BEAUTIFUL AND OTHERWISE.

SINCE some nimble bird chirped something about beautiful snow, folks have gotten up that they think there ain't any other kind. Which is wrong all over like a giraffe with a sore neck. Snow ain't anything but an outdoor ash pile, except that a real ash pile is useful. It gives a guy some excuse for going down into the cellar. Snow is Nature's gift to man. So are ingrown hairs.

NATURE is wonderful. She gives men the beautiful sunlight to shine into dark rooms and fade the near-Persian rug to a whisper. She stakes man to the gentle fain to nourish the flowers and gum the plaster off the ceiling of his stylish flat built in the Colander style. She gives us the soft Spring breezes to rustle the leaves and blow the dandruff off the musicians' velvet collars. Nature is all things, including whisk brooms.

THE depths of Nature have never been sounded. It's like dropping nickels in a telephone coin box. There is no bottom. But when she gives us snow, she is taking advantage of her long friendship with humanity. Trying to discover why pouts sing about snow is like endeavoring to find a needle in a haystack. With one slight exception. When you find the needle in the haystack you've found something useful.

THE last snowstorm that swatted Boston between the municipal ears flattened the works like prohibition has ironed out saloon tenors. It tied the street car system up like the village fire department working on Houdini in the parade scene. It tied up the snow contractors in the same way. We don't claim they were handcuffed like Houdini, but they might as well have been. A snow contractor is the only business man who is handicapped by the merchandise he deals in. When it starts to snow, you'd figure him looking out of the window and chirping that business was good. But when the snow arrives in the gloaming it discovers that it has to share the twilight with the contractor's mental condition.

NOT having a chance to practise during the Summer, he is never in condition. Boston should send her snow contractors to the Arctic on a training trip every October. They figure that the public thinks that one foot of snow is a novelty, and by the time it reaches six feet they are used to it. When the snow is thirty feet thick, he gets out his Wesjee board and gets in communication with the departed tribe of Mookus Indians who were Sun Worshippers. Every snow contractor is descended from this tribe on his financial side. After the snow piles start to look like the Rockies, he gets down on his kneecaps and prays. He knows that faith will move mountains.

AS a final resort, he hires men to shovel the snow from one spot to another. If a guy gets careless and loses a shovelful, he gets the gate with the golden hinges. When pedestrian traffic is blocked on the Tremont and Boylston street crossings, the contractor sends fifty shovelers to each crossing, so that they think there ain't any other kind. Which is fifty. One guy could do the job alone, but the contractor sends along the forty-nine others for company. While the one guy shovels the wrong side of the shovel up, the other forty-nine stand around and sing Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" from the opera "La Budget Municipal." In order to save the city money, the boss only gives the whole gang one shovel. The other forty-nine are timekeepers. If the snow is an inch deep, they take an eight-day clock with 'em. It is estimated that economizing on the price of forty-nine shovels saves the city at least the price of Russia's debt to the U. S. Which is a good comparison, as Russia doesn't intend to pay us anyway.

RECORD MEET FOR BOWLERS

4,000 Entries for Tourney to Open in Peoria Next Month

Peoria, Ill., Feb. 14.—The limited space and the large number of entries for the coveted annual international bowling tournament that the American Bowling Congress has scheduled for the Collesium here from March 10 to 31, may cause the officials in charge of that event to extend the tournament a week or ten days longer.

Over 4,000 bowlers are expected to compete for $20,000 prize money offered for the different events, and already between 750 and 900 five-men teams have entered and this list will be augmented by the two-men teams and individual entries.

STOP BOUT TO SAVE GIBBS

Woonsocket Boxer Is Badly Battered by Siegal in C. A. C. Bout

Nate Siegal of Revere had a very easy job on his hands when he tackled Woonsocket Joe Gibbs in the main bout at the Commercial Club's weekly show. Nate beat Joseph up pretty badly for three chapters and then out came Joe in the fourth. He floored the enemy for the count of nine, and had him nicely at the bell. In the fifth he sailed right in and dropped Gibbs and repeated when the latter staggered to his feet. Then the referee put a stop to the slaughter.

Billy Fitzsimmons of Yonkers and Joe Cherrie of New Haven boxed ten dazzling rounds, the former, who had the better of the weight, getting the verdict. Both boys displayed plenty of cleverness as well as aggressiveness.

In the prelims Young Gardner was fouled by Teddy Murphy in the fifth, and Jack Sullivan flattened Tiger Lyons in the fourth stanza.

GREENOUGH DEFEATS KELLOGG AT SQUASH

Harry Greenough defeated Foster Kellogg in the second day's playing for the squash racquets championship at the B. A. A.

Greenough won the first two games with his smashing drives which on the B. A. A. courts gave him no less than seven nicks in the first game. Kellogg played on the defensive in the early games, but improved his service in the third contest, which helped him to outscore his opponent in this and the succeeding game.

In the deciding game the pair were even at 13 all, and Greenough won the telling points with a low smash into the corner which Kellogg was unable to reach.

GUSTAFSON TO TEACH LACROSSE AT HARVARD

Paul Gustafson of the Boston Lacrosse Club has been appointed coach of the Harvard varsity and freshman teams, who report about March 1. The varsity schedule is announced as follows:

May 1, Hobart at Geneva; 3, Cornell at Ithaca; 7, Syracuse; 15, Yale.

BOSTON COLLEGE HIGH DEFEATS DORCHESTER

B. C. High defeated Dorchester High in a track meet which was finished in the East Armory, winning 58½ to 27½. B. C. High proved a well-balanced team, scoring in all the events, even gathering four points in the hurdles, an event for which they had no training.

DARTMOUTH LEADS AT WINTER SPORTS CARNIVAL

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 14.—Dartmouth led at the end of the first day of the Winter Sports' Carnival with a total of 37 points. Vermont was second with 19. McGill with 17, Middlebury with 7 and Williams with a single point trailed in the order named.

Harvard at Tufts on Alumni Day

Tufts and Harvard are to meet in baseball again for the first time in 1916. The Crimson has consented to play at Medford on Alumni Day, Saturday, June 10. Harvard triumphed in the last engagement after being to the rear when Whittaker of Tufts after being found for a three-bagger, walked four red legs, giving the Soldier Field habitues a 6 to 5 eleven-inning victory.

CALLAHAN ASKS CRACK AT TITLE

Brooklyn Battler Sure He Can Beat Leonard; Meets Lortz at Suffolk A. A.

By RINGSIDE.

"I would like to battle Leonard Tendler and Dundee in the order named. If I defeated this trio, I don't believe anybody could question my title as lightweight champion."

Frankie Callahan of Brooklyn was speaking. He had just completed a stiff workout at the D street gymnasium, South Boston, where he is training for his twelve-round bout with Harry Lortz of Kansas City, which will be staged at the Suffolk A. A. next Monday night.

"Leonard is afraid to meet me," continued Callahan. "You see, I bumped him badly before he won the title and he has never forgotten it. He's fought Dundee eight times, but that's because Johnny can't punch. Leonard could probably stop Dundee, but if he did he'd have to fight Tendler or myself. And either of us might stop him.

"If I can get Leonard into a ring in a real championship fight I feel sure I will beat him. As champion, I would meet Tendler and Dundee and anybody else who is rated with the blue-ribbon performers."

Callahan will be given a severe test by Lortz. The latter has a draw to his credit with Mitchell, while he has fought Mel Coogan, Willie Jackson and Johnny Dundee. Lortz is due in Boston today.

FRIZETTI WINS BY KAYO FROM BUCKLEY

Brockton, Feb. 14.—Jimmy Frizetti of Boston knocked out Johnny Buckley of South Boston in the second round at Clark Hall. Hayward Briggs of Brockton won over Sam Bell of Boston in 10 rounds; Harry Ah Chung of Salem and Tommy Moore of Providence fought an eight-round draw and Mickey Donovan of Brockton K O'd Young O'Brien of South Boston in one minute by the clock.

Tells Natick Need Is Haughton Football

William F. (Pooch) Donovan, Harvard's football trainer and track coach, has suggested to Natick High School authorities the advisability of adopting the Haughton system of football coaching, and has offered to give much of his spare time in assisting to install that system of football at Natick.

Pooch states he is very desirous of seeing more athletes of the Mahan and Casey type developed in his home town high school, and that he was not favorably impressed with the team of last Fall. He said Harvard will welcome all the athletes of quality that Natick can produce, and he believes that the adoption of the Haughton system of football coaching by the high school would give Natick boys an advantage over other youths upon entering the Cambridge university.

SWIMMING MEET IN 'Y' TANK

Yale and M. I. T. to Clash in Feature Events—Harvard Tackles Williams.

This evening at the Y. M. C. A. tank two swimming meets with M. I. T. vs. Yale and the Harvard natators vs. the Williams College tank men will furnish some of the best competition of the season. After these meets the Tech freshmen relay team will race with the Red Cross relay team.

The M. I. T. swimming team has been defeated but once in five years and that defeat was at the hands of last year's Yale team. Coach Kinputh of Yale has nearly the same squad as last season.

The Yale relay team recently broke the collegiate record for 200 yards, and this event, with Bidell, Young, Trowbridge and Colton swimming for the M. I. T., will be the feature. Colton and Biddell will oppose Hinsey and Solley of Yale in the fifty-yard dash.

The century should be a fast one with Bell and Trowbridge of Tech and Thurston and Captain Hincks competing for Yale.

Dick Greene, Bill Greene, holder of the Tech 220-yard record, and Pratt of Yale will furnish a fast race in the fancy diving event.

The diving event will be decidedly in favor of Tech. Skinner and Perkins and Lee in the Tech entries and Mac Aleeman and Ferguson will compete for Yale.

Dick Meacher of Yale and Stalbird of Tech are the leading contestants in the distance swims.

The Harvard and Williams dual meet will be run off between events of the M. I. T. and Yale meet.

FRIEDMAN BOXES HAYES TONIGHT

Twelve-Round Battle for N. E. Feather Title Enlivens Commonwealth Bill

By JACK CONWAY.

The Commonwealth A. A. will hand out a little pugilistic cheer at its quarters at Scenic Temple tonight in the way of thirty-eight rounds of boxing. As the card is topped off with the twelve-session contest, there ought should witness plenty of fast, clever boxing and some hard hitting.

Chick Hayes of Cambridge, who recently won the New England feather-weight championship from Bobby Joseph, will oppose Abe Friedman of New York in the feature bout of twelve frames. There are few gloves wielders in this section of the country who are as popular as Hayes. He is action every minute he is in the ring which naturally makes a hit with the fans.

In Friedman the champion will be opposed by a tidy boxer. The New York boy has shown to advantage in frolics in New England against Paul Demeris and Terry Martin. Hayes was his opponent when he first invaded New England. The Cambridge boxer won the decision after a torrid engagement, and Friedman is now out to even the score.

Young Chukas of Manchester and Freddy Williams, the calm Cambridge home, will furnish the thrills in another twelve-round bout. Louie Lynch of Providence and Kid McFarland of Lawrence are down to box eight rounds, while Barney McIntee of South Boston and Joe Chapman of Dorchester will be the principals in the opening six-round preliminary.

HAIL YOUNG DOUGLASS AS SECOND JOHN PAUL JONES

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 14.—Malcolm K. Douglass of Castine, Me., student at the Phillips Exeter Academy, who won the one mile handicap event at the R. A. A. meet from the 40-yard mark in 4 minutes 24 4-5 seconds, is hailed as a second John Paul Jones at Exeter, and Tom Keene Connors predicts that he will break the Exeter mile record of 4 minutes 26 1-5 seconds, made by L. L. Mackenzie in 1911. Douglass is running faster than Jones when he was a schoolboy here in 1915 as the great mile runner who after leaving Exeter, won running for Cornell became a world's record holder, only turned in 4 minutes 26 1-5 seconds at Exeter.

OLIVER RE-ELECTED AT BELLEVUE GOLF CLUB

President Edgar B. Oliver of the Bellevue Golf Club of Melrose was re-elected unanimously at the annual meeting of that organization. It was voted to increase the annual dues to $45, and initiation fee to $25. The former costs were $35 and $15 respectively. Other officers elected were: Horace B. Abbott, vice-president; R. Monte, secretary-treasurer; Andrew Lumsden, Thomas J. Kinsella and George H. Butters, members of the governing board for two years. The report showed the club to be in flourishing financial condition, with more than 75 on the waiting list.

STRANSKY TALKS ON MUSIC

As the conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra, which plays here at Symphony Hall on Tuesday, February 17, Josef Stransky knows a good deal about American composers, for during last season he not only gave an all-American program with the native composer, John Powell, playing his own "Rhapsody Negre," but in addition programmed no less than sixteen compositions by Americans in the course of the season. Of these works seven were novelties and their composers included the names of Chadwick, Rubin Goldmark, Hadley, Herbert, Hamleton, MacDowell, Morris, Powell, David Smith, Strube, Sweet and Mortimer Wilson.

"I think," said Mr. Stransky recently, "that the selection of compositions by Americans should be placed upon the same basis as the selection of works created in any other country—that is, the basis should be merit and nothing but merit. I believe in giving American music a trial for artistic and not for patriotic reasons. I am convinced that music here can stand on its own worth if we shall all only look for it, and that is why I have always given the American composer a place on our programs since the beginning of my career in New York. What is more, I have even noticed a rapid and steady development in native music—and as I look back over the programs of the eight years which represent my reasons with the Philharmonic, I see that this opinion of mine has been consistently backed up by practice, for year by year the number of American compositions has increased."

MODERN AND BEACON

The Modern and Beacon are next week presenting one of the most extraordinary bills ever shown to motion picture fans at popular prices.

Elsie Ferguson, recognized as one of the most brilliant screen stars in the world, has for her latest vehicle, "His House in Order," the picturization of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's famous dramatic success which created a sensation when first produced on the stage in 1906. Miss Ferguson is on account of remarkable power, so beautiful as she is talented, and she vests every character she portrays with exceptional charm.

In "Mary's Ankle," May Tully's famous farce, which had a great run in New York during the season of 1917, is appearing that new pair of co-stars, Douglas MacLean and Doris May, who are rapidly forging to the front as laugh-producers.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA

A distinct novelty in motion picture production is "A Twilight Baby," written and produced by Henry Lehrman for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which will be seen at the Scollay Square Olympia next week.

As far back as the time when the first comedy was made, the chief aim of the producer was to secure the elusive laugh through the medium of slap-stick incidents interminged with an occasional distance record for a pie threw, but in this comedy all precedents are barred.

"Should a Woman Tell?" a dramatic depiction of the struggle within a woman's heart, starring a new film celebrity, Miss Lake, is also shown.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQUARE THEATRE

"Soldiers of Fortune" is brimming over with Romance and Strife! Love and Adventure! That, in a nutshell, sums up this wonderfully compelling story—a story so absorbing, so rife with the accomplishments and exploits of "men who dared" that it stands in an adventure class by itself.

There will be five all-star acts of vaudeville, including "Jack Trainor & Co." in a comedy offering "Help"; Golden Gate trio, vaudeville's fastest dancing offering; Swor and Westbrook, and Cody and Leary, songsters.

Comedian Wins Job by Being "Fat"

DOUGLASS LEAVITT

Douglass Leavitt, the rotund comedian of "Tell It From Me," which comes to the Opera House, February 16, is probably indebted to the fact that he is corpulent for his present engagement in this merry musical comedy. "But, then, my avoirdupois has helped me to make many a dollar as an entertainer," says Mr. Leavitt.

According to Mr. Leavitt, the fat man never asks for sympathy, and the most beautiful thing in nature—the one he glories in—is in being fat. The fatter he gets the happier he grows. With every increase in diameter there comes an excess of ease, of geniality, of contentment.

Dieting with him is all hosh. He can sleep soundly, snore, is excused by public opinion from all sartorial display, and is normally just a happy man taking his ease. The old saw, "Nobody loves a fat man," has no terrors for him, because he feels certain he can go through life unharassed, unbossed and unjealous, and in growing fatter day after day he gains happiness with every additional ounce.

WALDORF THEATRE

"Big Bill" Kelleher, recently released from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, who won international notoriety through the wrecking of the National City Bank of Cambridge, is going on the stage. He will be seen, beginning Monday, at the Waldorf Theatre, where he will tell the story of his life and his story of how he, Martin Walsh and George W. Coleman won thousands at faro and wrecked the Cambridge bank.

In connection with Kelleher's appearance, "The Honor System," the greatest photodrama of prison life ever made, will be shown all week, providing a program varied and interesting enough to suit the most exacting.

PARK THEATRE

"On With the Dance," the daring Paramount Artcraft picture featuring Mae Murray, which attracted capacity crowds to the Park Theatre this week, begins the last week of its engagement Monday. This story of the loves and adventures of a young Russian immigrant girl among New York society folk has aroused the interest of Boston film lovers as no other photoplay has this season, and if it were not that bookings will not permit it, "On With the Dance" would remain longer.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

What is declared to be probably one of the most unusual comedy ever screened is "A Twilight Baby," produced by Henry Lehrman.

Beautiful May Allison also graces the program in "The Walkoffs," a play with a rich society background and a most lavish setting, with an extremely absorbing narrative. A wonderful bill of vaudeville, the Olympia News Weekly and clever short comedy, together with the wonderful playing.

FRADKIN SYMPHONY

At the Boston Symphony concerts next Friday and Saturday, Fredric Fradkin, the much-admired concert master of the orchestra, will be heard as soloist in Lalo's "Spanish Symphony." An event of notable interest at the same concerts will be the first concert performances of Henry F. Gilbert's "Dance in Place Congo," which raises the American negro's characteristic syncopated dances to the fullest symphonic eloquence.

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

Entertainment aplenty is offered in the program of the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre, Washington street, near Boylston. As a topline attraction, Owen Moore will be offered the first three days of the week in "Sooner or Later"—a vehicle in which Mr. Moore is superbly cast and which gives him plenty of opportunities to display that wonderfully captivating smile which has won for him a host of admirers.

TREMONT TEMPLE

Tomorrow begins the sixth week of the engagement of Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna" at Tremont Temple, where "Our Mary" continues to please photoplay enthusiasts twice daily. The present vehicle of Miss Pickford is beyond all doubt the most appealing story in which she has ever appeared.

UPHAMS CORNER STRAND

"Stronger Than Death," acknowledgedly Nazimova's masterpiece—perhaps for all time—heads the program this week at the Upham's Corner Strand.

BOSTON DOG SHOW TO OPEN MONDAY

Eskimo dogs will be one of the attractions at the Boston Dog Show, which opens in Mechanics Building on Washington's Birthday. There are several breeds of them, but the largest entry is being made by owners of Samoyedes, who before they were brought to this country were sledge dogs.

Millionaires —who take in roomers

PLAIN, simple country folk down in Texas went to bed one night as poor as the proverbial church mice and awoke to find themselves millionaires!

But they cannot accustom themselves to their new prosperity, and they do the most extraordinary things imaginable with their newly acquired wealth. Old Jake Wells went right out and bought himself $4.80 worth of bananas, ate them, and died.

Mrs. Snodgrass, wife of the village doctor (who hasn't the slightest idea how rich she is), built a large wing on the old homestead so she could take in more roomers!

And it's true! The great oil boom that has recently transformed the most desolate section of Texas into a land of untold wealth has produced a new phenomenon in our national life—unlike anything the world has ever seen before.

Don't fail to read "Millionaires Made While You Wait," by Frazier Hunt, in the new Cosmopolitan

Is parent-love a menace?

Great men almost invariably have had unusual mothers or fathers who played a conspicuous part in shaping their lives. And yet eminent psychologists tell us that the pampering love of parent for child—unless wisely directed—can do tremendous harm.

Harvey O'Higgins has interviewed one of the greatest nerve-specialists in America on this vital problem. Nothing more amazing and dramatic has been written about human relationships than "The Love-Image," in this month's Cosmopolitan.

Are wives harder to get along with than husbands?

Boxer thought so, because, as he told his friend Charny, his wife had called him a "drunken satyr" simply because he tried to light his cigarette at an electric-light bulb.

And Charny agreed with him because his wife had told him that he never kept a promise in his life. And he sometimes did! Gouverneur Morris, in "The Great Friends," has surpassed himself in this rollicking story of domestic misunderstandings and how they were overcome. Don't fail to read it in the new Cosmopolitan.

"Nearly everybody worth while reads Cosmopolitan"

When a financier's wife pawns her jewels

You won't know until the end of the story why she did it. But when the pretty young wife of a feeble old millionaire is seen to frequent a pawnbroker's, and then enter a cheap lodging-house, being watched by a good-looking detective—well, there's enough mystery, love, action, and high finance in this unusual story to satisfy anybody.

"Her Secret"—by Will Payne—is the first of a series of the adventures of Ben Bodet, business detective, who—we prophesy—will take rank as one of the most interesting sleuths of fiction.

They discovered the fountain of youth

"Phony" Dick and "Overcoat" Bennie had just relieved an oil magnate of $500. But when they went and lost it on the Kentucky Derby they simply didn't have the heart to go home to Mrs. "Phony," who kept the cash (and who also kept track of their prowess in the papers). So they decided to take a little fishing-trip out California way, and that's how they happened to discover the Beauty Fountain.

You who have applauded his "Boston Blackie" stories will delight in this crook story in a lighter vein by Jack Boyle in the current Cosmopolitan.

Don't miss these in the same number—

MANY NEW PLAYS COME ON MONDAY

Mary Roberts Rinehart created the amusing character of "Bab the Sub-Deb" in a series of stories a year or two ago. She was a flapper with wonderful ideas and a poor notion of spelling.

George Tyler, who had such luck with dramatizations of "Pollyanna," has had Edward Childs Carpenter working on "Bab," and we are to see the result at the Hollis Monday.

Helen Hays, who will play Bab, is unknown in Boston, but she has enjoyed a dazzling career during the past two seasons, though she is not out of her teens.

She started as Pollyanna, and then created the "might-have-been daughter" in "Dear Brutus." She was positively a sensation in this part, but she was lifted out of it before Gillette brought Brutus to Boston, and made another huge hit in the new Booth Tarkington play, "Clarence," which we haven't seen yet, by the way. Now she leaves Clarence for the part of Bab and we shall see for ourselves if she is up to specifications.

Another Young Star

Another very young actress who has shot up to the top in a brief period is Constance Binney who comes in "39 East" to the Wilbur next week.

By the way what a flock of figures have been getting into the titles of plays, "Three Faces East," "Tea for Three," "At 9:45" and now "39 East." These seem to run in fashions.

Miss Binney was in Boston only a short time ago, but her part was so small that few will remember her just a little dance in one of the Princess Theatre musical pieces. We don't think she had any lines. Now she returns a leading woman, no less, and playing opposite that romantic looking Henry Hull whose flop and recovery were so poignantly expressed in "The Man Who Came Back." I am told that "39 East" is a sweet and simple little comedy of boarding house life.

That Cohan Feller.

The genius of George Cohan was never more clearly demonstrated than when he saved "The Royal Vagabond" from the dump and turned it into one of the biggest musical hits in several seasons.

The piece, which we are to see at the Colonial Monday, was originally a conventional European operetta. As such it did not make a hit. Cohan was about ready to pass it up, though he felt with such a pretty score it ought to survive, when he got the idea of turning it into a burlesque of itself. As he says himself, he made mortal enemies of two librettists, broke the management and fought seventy fights with a music publisher long several nights' sleep, but pulled out a big winner. As Jazz Cohan sang or two injected some of the pep into beautiful score has not furnished, and the result was a show which the connoisseurs of Broadway applauded lustily.

Tucking 'Em in Uptown.

The Shubert are putting up a better fight against nature than the railroads did against the blizzard in keeping the Boston Opera House open nearly all the time this season.

And if you think people won't go away uptown for something they want you should have been with me Thursday night. First I looked into Symphony Hall where John McCormack had 3,000 people out in front and 300 more tucked around him on the stage. Then I journeyed a couple of blocks further up and found Harry Lauder roaring in direct a multitude which stretched away back to the last rows in the balcony and numbered fully 2,000. Both of these extraordinary theatres to accommodate the contents of those two vast buildings.

If they ever get down transportation facilities up that way the prospect should be fairly rosy for a time.

"Take It From Me," that cheery musical conglomeration which played the Shubert last season for a few weeks and then made a big hit in New York, follows Lauder into the Opera House next week. There have been one or two minor changes in the cast, but the three or four clever comedians who put the piece across before are still on the job.

Speaking Out in Meetin'.

It is exasperating to see a brilliant comedy like "Tea for Three" presenting its engagement in Boston because of lack of patronage. We own the existence of most offensive and generally flamboyant lot of reformers and high brows in the United States. Goading by the outcry they make people in other cities think there must be a million of them, but when it comes to entertainment they are always demanding comes to their doors they can't muster enough patriots to pay a Punch and Judy show.

We are still enjoying a reputation for culture over there, due to a lot of people who died forty years ago, but it is seriously doubt whether there is a figured public here of any size which can afford the price of a ticket for a first class theatre.

The most astute theatrical managers know that Boston loves a rough show. Bedroom farces, musical revues of jazz and paint and silk tights are certain to draw capacity houses. Other cities like them also, but other cities do not pretend like Boston, and some other cities have a public for high class entertainment also.

Advice to Wives.

Ladies, if you own one of those careful husbands who says, "Darling, you look just as good to me in your old mother hubbard as though you wore a satin gown," don't poison him because they can hang you for that. Just take him to see "Linger Longer Letty" and force him to recant.

Charlotte Greenwood in the first two acts of Letty wears grotesque garments, hand-me-downs of every description, and looks as unprepossessing as an alleyway angora. But in the last act when she revolts and employs a man modiste to turn her out, well it is positively astonishing what can be done. She surprised me, and I knew that Miss Greenwood wasn't homely off the stage. Yet there are a few chorus girls getting by in some musical comedies in town that would offer no opportunities to Lon Carlile, the greatest he-dress-maker in the world.

Chorus Anthology.

When you see a pretty chorus these days, give three silent cheers for the manager of the show because he has accomplished something. With the disappearance of the cocktail the life of a chorus girl has lost much of its attractions.

Pretty girls find the dull grind of rehearsals and performances unrelieved by midnight suppers, champagne and lobster no longer very attractive. The stage door John is still in evidence but he has grown tight. Expensive presents are no longer the rule; diamonds are by no means the ginger ale bubbles. A girl has to live on her wages.

To the average chorus now gets a living wage. Where she was asked to get along on $15 per week she now gets $18 and frequently more. If she is a really beautiful girl she can almost name her own figure. Nevertheless the hot house flower type of show girl is quitting the business and in her place the legitimate frequently are compelled to hire ladies who would look more at home making beds in hotels.

These facts make the number of attractive looking girls in "The Rose of China" worthy of mention. This chorus was chosen with discrimination. Perhaps discrimination is piece of Oscar Shaw fascinates the damsels.

Trying to Break Her Neck.

Trixie Janney, an old Boston favorite who hasn't played her home town for several years, is conspicuous in the cast of the $2.50 Wynn show, and among other things falls down a long flight of stairs.

"I don't see how she can do that without getting hurt," I heard somebody say, and, being somewhat perplexed, I asked her.

"I get hurt," replied the dancer. "Believe me, I get hurt. On my first fall the opening night I threw the muscles of my left arm and had an awful wrench working it back. The second night I escaped with a skinned knee, the next performance I got a beautiful bruise on my hip and I add to my collection of injuries at every performance. I do hope the audience doesn't think those stairs are soft. I could say a lot about that part, but I don't know how much of it you could print.

"However, don't take me seriously. If I had my scenes as all I'd never be trying to break my neck every night."

Something J. Buij Overlooked.

Nine times out of ten a producer with such a play at "The Outrageous Josephine" would look around for a leading man with a Piccadilly accent, and a record of having made several appearances with a lot of London stars with the title "Sir" attached to their names.

John Craig might have pleaded a good excuse if he had done so, too, for the evening before the Sir Erring war drama at the Arlington Theatre is supposed to be an English star visiting this country, and, of course, her son in English, although he happens to enlist in the American army. But Craig knows his public too well to push aside a popular favorite like Charles Bickford, just because Mrs. Palmer herself is as English as tiffin. Bickford grew up—theatrically speaking—with Craig Players. Cambridge is his native city. Besides, he looks like a young fellow that would make a good among the doughboys. He certainly has a great chance, with such associates as Craig has brought into the big company now supporting Mary Young, and he is making the most of it.

Sounds Like Society Notes.

An inventory of the principal players corralled by Manager McArdle for his Somerville stock company reveals an interesting group. He has with him Miss Tallulah Bankhead, daughter of Congressman Bankhead and granddaughter of U. S. Senator Bankhead of Alabama; Miss Grace Field, daughter of the late millionaire speculator, Richard (Dick) Canfield; Elsie Hackett, daughter of a Pittsburgh industrial man, whose wealth is estimated to be in the millions; Malcolm Fassett, a prominent collegiathete; Booth Howard, son of one of New York's most eminent and skillful surgeons.

HOLLIS ST. THEATRE

George C. Tyler will present in this city at the Hollis Street Theatre, beginning Monday, February 16, the new comedy, "Bab," founded on Mary Roberts Rinehart's popular stories of a young school girl, known in polite circles as a subdeb, which for the benefit of the uninitiated means a modern debutante, who considers herself grown-up, but whom her family stubbornly contends is but a nota removed from the nursery. The dramatization by Edward Child Carpenter is four act, and shows Bab in the midst of her amusing and sprightly adventures, two acts being laid at the home of the Archibalds in the city, and two in the boathouse of their seaside residence.

No little interest will centre about the appearance here of the girl who plays the title role in the person of Helen Hayes. Helen Hayes, Tom Powers, George Alison, Grace Hagerson, Arthur Eldred, Katherine Alexander, James Kearney, Morgan Farley, Raymond Griffith and Geraldine Bartlett are in the cast.

WILBUR THEATRE

Boston will have its first chance to pass judgment on a play which held the attention of Broadway for many months next Monday night, when Messrs. Lee and J. J. Shubert present "39 East," at the Wilbur Theatre, with dainty Constance Binney and handsome Henry Hull as the featured players. This new drama of Rachel Crothers, whose "Old Lady 31" is still vivid in the minds of Boston playgoers, has been awaited somewhat impatiently by Boston theatre patrons.

"39 East" is described as "a Springtime love story of present day New York," and as everyone familiar with New York knows that only the occupants of certain sections of the metropolis unpolled by the supercivilizing trend of today could be by any stretch of the imagination connected with springtime or a love story, it is not surprising to learn that the piece abounds in those old-fashioned and delightful folk.

To this boarding house comes a young girl from the West, in whom one of the younger boarders, Joseph A. Gibbs, takes a fancy.

Others in the cast, besides Miss Binney and Mr. Hull, are Alison Skipworth, Lucille Moore, Edith Graham and Albert Carroll.

COLONIAL THEATRE

At the Colonial Theatre, Monday evening, Cohan and Harris will present their greatest musical triumph, "The Royal Vagabond," a Cohanized Opera Comique; that has just closed a phenomenal run of one solid year in New York. The play is in three acts; books and lyrics by George M. Cohan. Stephen Jr. Sainnyey and William Carey Duncan; music by Anselm Goetzel and George M. Cohan, with special numbers by Harry Tierney; staged by Julian Mitchell and Sam Forrest. The story has to do with the Crown Prince of a Bargravian dynasty, who, reared in an atmosphere of uncompromising autocracy, is really democratic at heart. The entire action of the piece is not only kikky dramatic, but cleverly contrived throughout, with a delightful love story that leads to a surprising denouement. Robinson Newbold heads the superb cast of principals, which includes Virginia O'Brien, Frederic Santley, Frances Demarest, Louis Simon, Winifred Harris, Grace Daniels, John Goldsworthy, Edna Pierce, Roger Gray, Gladys Zell, Charles Wayne, Marjorie Whitford, Irving Rose, Lou Lockett, Walter Palm and others, with Mary Eaton, the dainty dancer.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

With a story that is entertaining from the rise of the curtain to the finish and abundant comedy, "Take It From Me" will be presented at the Boston Opera House on next Monday, February 16, for two weeks.

The authors, Will B. Johnstone, who provided the book and lyrics, and Will R. Anderson, who furnished the music, have turned out a highly diverting, up-to-date and snappy show, bound to win favor anywhere, while the cast is excellent throughout.

Zoe Barnett, as the vampire prima donna, heads the list individual hits, and she never sang or acted better than she does in this role. Her vampire dance is an exceedingly clever number. Fred Hillebrand, A. Douglas Leavitt and Alice Hills provide the laughs of the piece. Among the specialties the dancing of the Gardner Trio wins no end of applause. Theirs are the real twinkletoes. Then the Skating Waltz, one of the Mr Bit—so more graceful and charming dance specialty could be imagined.

The hero of "Take It From Me" is left a large department store, which he is to retain permanently, providing that he succeeds in operating the establishment profitably for one year. This arouses merchant calls to his aid and two male friends, who jump in and help Mr. Trelane to help him "put the store over the top."

WALDRON'S CASINO

"A Whirl of Pleasure" is the vehicle provided for the use this season of "The Million Dollar Dolls" coming to Waldron's Casino on Monday. In every essential this show is heralded as truly an excellent musical organization made better by its personnel of attractive femininity, clever comedians and talented vocalists and vaudeville entertainers. It abounds in sparkling dialogue, brilliant repartee and humorous situations and entanglements. Cliff Bragdon and Zoe Mac are the principal jesters. Mr. Bragdon supplies a brand of humor that is described in the fashion of stage nomenclature as "eccentric," a medium of legitimate laugh-production infrequently met with in burlesque.

KEITH'S THEATRE

At Keith's Theatre next week first honors will be divided between Wilkie Bard, the eminent English character comedian, and Jimmie Barry, the equally eminent American character comedian. The latter will be assisted by Mrs. Barry. Paul Morton and Naomi Glaze will present a musical satire entitled "1920-1950." Alice Hamilton will be seen in "A Breath of Lavender and Old Lace." A very unusual allegory—very modern in its application—by Frances Nordstrom, entitled "The Heart of Annie Wood," will be presented, with Eleanor Griffith in the title role.

CHICAGO OPERA

Announcement is also made that Aana Fitziu, considered the best Nedda among contemporary singers, has been re-engaged by the Chicago Opera Association, and will appear as Pagliacci with Titta Ruffo.

Another feature of great interest is the fact that "Boudoir," the new ballet pantomime by Felix Borowski, the Chicago composer, will be given as the special ballet performance on Friday evening of the second week. It is in one act and will be given directly after Don Pasquale. The book is by Pavley and Oukralesky, the incomparable premiers danseurs stellen, with the entire crops de ballet.

In fact, the great interest centres on the four novelties to be presented in Boston for the first time; Aphrodite, Camille Erlanger's tragic French grand opera with Mary Garden in the role of Chrysis, the Egyptian courtesan, and Edward Johnson in the principal tenor role of Demetrius; "L'Heure Espanole" ("The Spanish Hour"), an amusing one-act opera by Maurice Ravel, the modern French impressionist, with Yvonne Gall and Alfred Marguenat in the principal roles; on Tuesday night of the second week the Puccini Trilogy, Il Tabarro (The Cloak), Suor Angilica and Gianni Schicchi, three separate, contrasted and dramatic moods.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

Next week's program at the Loew's Orpheum Theatre is fairly bubbling over with good things in the line of vaudeville and photoplays. Vera Burt and Syncopated Steppers head the variety attractions and will bring a snappy melange of new melodies and versatile dance diversions. "The Volunteers," will bring an amusing and novel festival, by George Votsford. Reports have it that they are exceptionally clever and offer something really different. Ann Wardell and Jack Duncourt are also coming in a timely comedy offering styled, "Election Night." Arthur Lloyd, the humorous card index; Charles and Mayme Butler in a conglomeration of eccentric doings; and others will complete the vaudeville. Owen Moore will be shown in his up-to-the-minute screen offering, "Sooner or Later."

'THE WEDDING RING"

William A. Brady's presentation of Owen Davis' new play, "The Wedding Ring," which was postponed from last Tuesday afternoon, owing to the illness of a member of the cast, John Cromwell, will have its first performance on a stay stage next Friday afternoon at the Plymouth Theatre.

"THE GIRL IN THE LIMOUSINE"

"The Girl in the Limousine," which opens at the Plymouth Theatre with a Washington's Birthday matinee, Monday, February 23, promises to give Boston theatregoers a warm ride during her engagement in this city. This laughable farce has been meeting with great success for the past six months in New York.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"It Pays to Advertise" is announced as the attraction for the coming week at the Somerville Theatre, and it would be impossible to find a brighter and snappier comedy. This sensational and record-breaking success is the joint work of Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett. Among others in the cast will be Audrey Baird, Booth Howard, Jerry O'Day, George Wetherald and Henry Crosses.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"The Naughty Wife." Fred Jackson's screamingly funny farce, is heralded as the attraction for the coming week at the Malden Auditorium. Jackson has constructed a situation that would bring laughter to the lips of the Sphinx, could she but witness this farce of farces.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

The schedule for next week at Loew's Columbia Theatre, Washington and Motte streets is comprised of the foremost stars of the silent world. Monday's program includes Monroe Salisbury, the Mansfield of the screen, in "The Phantom Melody"; and Gladys Brockwell, in "Flames of the Flesh."

McISAAC says that

"TEA FOR THREE," announces its last week. A vey amusing comedy, brilliantly performed. Park Square.

"ROSE OF CHINA," the dainty little operetta at the Shubert, seems to have made a hit locally. Lots of good people in it.

ED WYNN'S CARNIVAL having sensational success. Mr. Wynn is all over the place, and the people like him. Tremont.

"AT 9:45" enters upon its last week. An exciting detective melodrama. Plymouth.

"LINGER LONGER LETTY," with Charlotte Greenwood and a Morosco company, is drawing well at the Majestic.

"OUTRAGEOUS MRS. PALMER," at the Arlington, offers Mary Young in a remarkable role and with fine support.

MRS. DANNY A BUSY GIRL

Anyone who believes there's no such a thing as a domestic actress should interview Elinore Glynn of Danny Lund's musical comedy company at the Waldorf Theatre. For Miss Glynn, in private life, Mrs. Danny Lund, is an authority on the subject.

Here are a few of her daily occupations:

Looking after Danny Lund.

Looking after Danny Lund, Jr.

Looking after a score of chorus maidens.

Looking after the wardrobe of the more-than-a-score of persons who comprise the Danny Lund company.

Designing new costumes for said company.

Destaining ensemble numbers for said company.

Putting said company through its dancing paces.

And yet says she: "These who say that stage life operates against domesticity are wrong. At least Danny and I think so. We are able to maintain our home life in every city we visit."

Mae in the Steerage.

Mae Murray, former Follies favorite and now a motion picture star, made a short excursion in the steerage of an ocean liner to make scenes for the first George Fitzmaurice production, "On With the Dance," which begins its second and last week at the Park Theatre on monday.

The steamer was crowded with emigrants of all description and they cleared a small space on the deck, where Miss Murray, clad in humble Russian peasant costume, did an eccentric dance. Her audience looked on in open-mouthed wonder. Afterward the pretty player chatted with them and left, wishing them all "bon voyage."

Doris May's Fair Ankle.

The fair ankle of Doris May, who, with Douglas MacLean, is appearing in Thomas H. Ince pictures, received a warm reception that it did not exactly expect during the filming of "Mary's Ankle," the photoplay which is this week's attraction at the Modern and Beacon. At the psychological moment a pretty girl sprains her ankle in front of a young doctor's office. Out he comes to attend to her injured member.

No sooner had Mr. MacLean started to apply the remedy to Miss May's ankle, while the camera clicked merrily, than the latter sprang to her feet with an exclamation of pain.

"My foot is on fire!" she cried.

Mr. MacLean started in alarm. Then he looked at the liniment bottle in his hand. "Under no circumstances rub the liquid into the skin," he read.

New Kind of Birth.

Highly imaginative, yet thoroughly plausible in its action, is "A Twilight Baby," which heads the program next week at the Scollay Square Olympia.

"The Twilight Baby," as it was christened by Mr. Hawkesworth, is born of an intoxicated musician and the twilight. The musician is a bass horn player, and as he croons into the instrument a bouncing baby boy is born.

The character development of the baby is a matter of slow process. It is allowed to enjoy no nourishing baby foods, no castiles, no other infantile appliances, but grows up to go to jail.

New Policy at Orpheum

Announcement is made that beginning with next Sunday the Orpheum Theatre will inaugurate a new policy, that is to say that on Sunday they will give one select concert instead of the usual single beginning at 7 o'clock. Under the new schedule the doors will open at 4:30 every Sunday afternoon and the first concert will begin immediately thereafter, and last until about 7 o'clock. The second concert will commence at 8:30 and last until 10:30. The concerts will be similar to those that have characterized the standard policy of this house, comprising a long list of attractive vaudeville and feature photoplays in addition to the orchestral numbers. There is no doubt that this new innovation will meet with popular appeal among the large number of lovers of this capacious and beautiful theatre.

Three Arts Ball.

The Three Arts Ball which so startled Boston society last season will be given this year in Boston under the direction of Boston's smart set, R. W. Hawkesworth, who is in charge of the Club de Vingt in New York city (formerly Vanderbilt stable), is making arrangements for this function which is to be held at the Copley-Plaza instead of the Copley-Plaza on Friday evening, March 5.

It is not often that the social set lend themselves to the Bohemian atmosphere of a ball of this nature and the enthusiasm already displayed assures the committee of a very successful party. Mr. Hawkesworth is bringing her New York orchestra of fifty musicians to Boston and the cream of the theatrical profession will also be well represented.

The feature of the evening will be the "Japanese Hina Festival," which Mrs. Penrose Stanlaw took part in at the Plaza in New York. The pageant is under the direction of Michio Itow, the Japanese dancer, who has appeared at the Metropolitan Opera. "Tickets may be obtained from Mr. Hawkesworth's apartment at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, or the State Street Trust Company, at No. 678 Boylston street.

"HONEY-GIRL"

One of the most notable events of the coming season at Keith's Park Square Theatre is the announcement that Sam H. Harris will offer his newest musical play "Honey-Girl" at this playhouse beginning with Washington's birthday matinee, February 23rd. The book is by Edward Clark, while the lyrics are by Neville Fleeson, and the music by A. von Tilzer. "Honey-Girl" marks the initial venture of Mr. Harris as an individual producer and in the presentation of this production, Mr. Harris has spared neither time nor expense and has compiled a cast of principals that include Edna Bates, Louise Meyers, Rene Bidonia, Sissie Sewell, Lynn Overman, George McKay and Edwin Holt.

BOSTON THEATRE

At the Boston Theatre next week William Farnum will be seen for the first time in the wonderfully intriguing and realistic screen drama, "Heart Strings," by Henry Albert Phillips.

THIS is the anniversary of the beginning of the Augustan era, 27 B. C., the period of highest literary activity in Rome under the patronage of Augustus and Maecenas. Virgil, Horace and Ovid were a few of the shining lights. The term Augustan is applied to certain periods of literary brilliancy.

"April Folly," soon to be seen in leading motion picture theatres, is a Cosmopolitan production, released through Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft picture, under direction of Robert Z. Leonard. Scenario by Adrian Johnson.

SHE thought so still more when the women surrounded her in the lounge and drew her in among them to take coffee. They were all as merry as magpies, and seemed to have clean forgotten the tragedy of the ship except in so far as it lent a thrill to conversation. Several who were going on the next day to different parts of the country pressed her to visit them at their homes.

Mrs. Stanislaw came up with her claws sheathed in silk and a strange woman in tow, and murmuring: "I must introduce Mrs. Janis; she is anxious to know all you can tell her of poor Miss Poole," stood smiling with a feline delight in the encounter. April, turning from her bitter face to the other woman, an elaborately dressed shrew with a domineering hook to her nose, had the thankful feeling of a mouse who has just missed by a hair's breadth the click of the trap.

"I'm afraid I can give you no more information than is already available," she said distantly.

"It seems to be a most shameful affair," complained Mrs. Janis, "and the wretched girl apparently has no relatives one can write to."

"None," stated April firmly and gratefully. She could well imagine how this lady with a grievance would treat the feelings of relations.

"Perhaps Captain Bellew might know of some one," purred Mrs. Stanislaw.

"You had better ask him." It was April's turn to smile, though wryly enough. "He will deal with you without the gloves," she thought, and turned away from them.

The lounge was a pleasant place with French windows leading into the garden; deep chairs and palms were scattered everywhere, and it smelled fragrantly of coffee and cigars. Groups of men and women clustered about the small tables, smoking and talking. One corner was fenced off by a little counter, from behind which a distinguished-looking waiter dispensed cocktails and liqueurs with the air of a duke bestowing decorations. This was Leon, who knew the pet drinks and secret sins of everyone in South Africa, but whose discreet eyes told nothing.

The knowledge he possesses of men, women and things would have made a fascinating volume, but no one had been able to unseal his lips. He hardly ever left his supply mixing the drinks and indicating with his hand the tables to which they should be carried. April was in the room for a few seconds without being aware of it. Neither did she know until much later that this pleasant lounge was one of the principal gossip centres of the country. In its smoky atmosphere many a fair reputation has been withered away, many a great name has been tarnished forever, and for the baby scandals that have been born there, lad legs and arms and wings stuck onto them, and been sent anteloping all over the country or flying in every direction, their name is legion.

Left Alone

Bellew had left her immediately after lunch. He said that he had an appointment with an old friend of his mother's, and would be leaving to stay with her for several days before continuing his journey.

April had, in fact, from her seat in the lounge, seen him come out of the lift into the hall accompanied by a little bent old lady, and watched them drive away together in a taxi.

Thereafter she breathed more freely, and a longing to be in the open air, out of his smoke-laden atmosphere, moved her to extricate herself from the chattering crowd of women and make her way to the verandah. It was cool and fresh there under the stone portico, with wells of green coolness hanging between her and the blazing sunshine and color of the garden.

She sat down, and, as is always the way with a woman in moments of silence and beauty, her thoughts immediately clustered about the image of the man she loved. What was Vereker Sarle thinking of her? Would he go from the Cape to his home in north without trying to see her again?

While she pondered these things he went out through one of the tall French windows and came toward her, followed by his dark and saturnine friend. They approached like men sure of a welcome, Sarle, smiling in his disarmingly boyish fashion, the other also smiling, too—but with a difference. There was some quality of sardonic amusement and curiosity in his glance that arrested April's instant attention.

"I warned you that it is hard to shake off your friends in this country," said Sarle gayly. "May I claim your attention for a little while? Sir Ronald tells me that you and he are quite old friends."

Her heart gave a leap. Instantly she understood the sardonic humor of the stranger's demeanor. If any other man than Sarle had been there, she would have thrown up the sponge. But she could not bear to have the truth stripped and exposed there before him. It was too brutal. If he must know, he should know in a less cruel manner than that. She faced the newcomer squarely, her features frozen to an outward composure.

"This is a very pleasant surprise, Lady D.," he said, with courteous familiarity, while his eyes expressed the utmost amusement. "It must be nearly two years since we met."

"Oh, surely much longer than that," she answered, and her smile was almost as mocking as his.

They stood taking each other's measure, while Sarle dragged forward some chairs. A fatal admiration came into the man's face. She was a fraud, and he knew that she knew that he knew it, but he had also to acknowledge that there was fine metal in her, even for an adventuress. As a duellist, at least she seemed worthy of his steel. Besides, in her gown of faint lilac and her orchid-laden hat, she was a very entrancing vision. The ugly might be picturesque as well as piquant.

"I trust you left Lord Sandilands well?" he inquired politely. She dug desperately in her mind for a moment. It seemed foolishly important to be truthful, even though this man knew she was acting a lie.

"He is never very well in the Winter," she answered, without any apparent interlude for thought. Sir Ronald was even more pleased with her.

Back to Wall

"That is so," he agreed. "I remember, when I left Bathwick that Autumn, he was just in for his bad annual bout of bronchitis."

The two men sat down, and, with her permission, smoked. Sarle had placed his chair where he could look full at her, missing no shade of expression on her face. His frank, warm eyes enfolded her in a gaze of trust and devotion that was as patent to the other man as to her. To her it was no peace for her in that gaze—things were too desperate for that—but it nerved her resolution to fence to the death with this polished gamester.

She had her back to the wall and resolved to die fighting rather than make an ignominious surrender before the man she loved.

Sarle looked from one to the other contentedly. For once, his far-seeing valid eyes played him false.

"I am glad you two are friends," he said. Then, addressing April, "Odd that we shouldn't have discovered it before, for, you know, Kenna is my best friend as well as my ranching partner."

They sat talking for close on to two hours, and at the end of that time April rose with a laugh on her lips and many a light and airy reason why she could not stay. It was too hot; she must rest a little; she had unpacking to do.

Even after rising from her chair she lingered, as if regretful to go; but they could not persuade her to stay and have tea with them. Presently she sauntered off slowly, leaving a promise that she would dine with them that evening. She did not know why she promised. As she walked away, sauntering, because her feet seemed as lead-laden as her heart she told herself that it would be better to go and dine with the sharks in Table Bay than sit down again with Ronald Kenna.

The Cinema Murder

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

"I MEANT, at the first chance, to rob Aunt Esther, to come to London, dress myself properly and find a post on the stage, if possible. I wasn't particular. Then one day a man came to see me—an American. He'd travelled all the way from New York because he was interested in what he called the mysterious Romilly disappearance. He knew that I had been Douglas' friend. He asked me to come out and identify you! He offered me my passage, a hundred pounds, and to give me a start in life here, if I needed it. So I came out with him."

"With Dane," he muttered.

Found Philip

She nodded.

"Yes, that was his name—Mr. Edward Dane. I came out to identify Douglas."

"You weren't going to give him away?" Philip asked curiously.

"Of course not. I should have made my bargain, after I had scared Douglas for leaving as he did. I should have said that it wasn't the man. And instead—I found you!"

He tapped the table with his fingers, restlessly. A new hope was forming in his brain. This, indeed, might be the end of his troubles.

"Listen," he said earnestly. "Dane has always suspected me. Sometimes I have wondered whether he hadn't the truth at the back of his head. You can make me safe forever."

She made no reply. Her eyes were watching his face. She seemed to be waiting to hear what else he had to say.

"Don't you understand?" he went on impatiently. "You have only to tell Dane that I am neither Douglas nor Philip, but curiously like both, and he will chuck the thing up. He must. Then I shall be safe. You see that, don't you?"

"Yes, I see that," she admitted. "Well?"

"Tell me exactly how much of Douglas' money you have spent?" she demanded.

"Only the loose money from the pocketbook. Not all of that. I am earning money now."

She leaned across the table.

"What about the twenty thousand pounds?"

"I haven't touched it," he assured her, "not a penny."

"On your honor?"

He rose silently and went to his desk, unlocked one of the drawers, and drew from a hidden place a thin strip of paper. He smoothed it out on the table before her.

"There's the deposit note," he said—"Twenty thousand pounds to the joint or separate credit of Beatrice Wenderly and Douglas Romilly, on demand. The money's there still. I haven't touched it."

She gripped the paper in her fingers. The sight of the figures seemed to fascinate her. Then she looked around.

"How can you afford to live in a place like this, then?" she demanded suspiciously. "Where does your money come from?"

"The play," he told her.

"What, all this?" she exclaimed.

"It is a great success. The theatre is packed every night. My royalties come every week to far more than I could spend."

She looked once more around her, gripped the deposit note in her fingers, and leaned back in her chair. She laughed curiously. Her eyes had travelled back to Philip's anxious face.

"Wonderful!" she murmured. "You paid the price, but you've won. You've had something for it. I paid the price, and up till now——"

She stared at the paper in her hand. Then she looked away into the fire.

"I can't get it all into my head," she went on. "I pictured him here, living in luxury, spending the money of which he had promised me a share. And he's dead! That was his body—that unrecognizable thing they found in the canal. You killed him—Douglas! He was so fond of life, too."

"Fond of the things which meant life to him," Philip muttered.

Not a Brute

"I should never have believed that you had the courage," she observed ruminatingly. "After all, then, he wasn't faithless. He wasn't the brute I thought him."

She sat thinking for what seemed to him to be an interminable time. He broke in at last upon her medit ations.

"Well," he asked, "what are you going to say to Dane?"

"I mustn't give you away—at least I don't think so," she promised cautiously. "I shall see. Presently I will make terms, only this time I am not going to be left. I am going to have what I want.'

"But he'll be waiting to hear from you!" Philip exclaimed. "He may come here, even."

She shook her head.

"He's gone to Chicago. He can't be back for five days. I promised to write, but I shan't. I'll wait until he's back. And in the meantime—"

Her fingers closed upon the deposit note. He nodded shortly.

"That's yours," he said. "You can have it all. I have helped myself to a fresh start in life at his expense. That's all I wanted."

She folded up the paper and thrust it carefully into the bosom of her gown. Then she stood up.

"Well," she pronounced, "I think I am getting used to things. It's wonderful how callous one can become. The banks are closed now, I suppose?"

He nodded.

"They will be open at 9 o'clock in the morning."

"First of all, then," she decided, "I'll make sure of my twenty thousand pounds, and then we'll see. I don't think you'll find me hard, Philip. I ought not to be hard on you, ought I?"

She looked at him most kindly, and he began to shiver. Curiously enough, her very kindness, when he realized the knowledge which lay behind her brain, was hateful to him. He had pleaded for her forgiveness, even her toleration, but—anything else seemed horrible! She strolled across the room and glanced at the clock, took one of his cigarettes from a box and lit it.

"Well, this is queer!" she murmured reflectively. "Now I want some dinner, and I'll see your play, Philip. You shall take me. Get ready quickly, please."

He looked at her doubtfully.

"But, Beatrice," he protested, "think! You know why you came here? You know the story you will have to tell. We are strangers, you and I. What if we are seen together?"

She snapped her fingers at him.

"Pooh! Who cares! I am a stranger in New York, and I have taken a fancy to you. You are a young man of gallantry, and you are going to take me out. * * * We often used to talk of a little excursion like this in London. We'll have it in New York instead."

He turned slowly towards the door of his bedroom. She was busy looking at her own eyes in the mirror, and she missed the little gleam of horror in his face.

"In ten minutes," he promised her.

CHAPTER XIII.

BEATRICE replaced the program which she had been studying, on the ledge of the box, and turned towards Philip, who was seated in the background. There was something a little new in her manner. Her tone was subdued, her eyes curious.

"You are really a wonderful person, Philip," she declared. "It's the same play, just as you used to tell it to me, word for word. And yet it isn't. What is it you have gained, I wonder?—a sense of atmosphere, breadth, something strangely vital."

"I am glad you like it," he said simply.

"Like it! It's amazing! And what an audience! I never thought that the people were so fashionable here, Philip. I am sitting right back in the box, but ten minutes after I have cashed my draft tomorrow I shall be buying clothes. You won't be ashamed to be seen anywhere with me then."

He drew his chair up to her side, a little haggard and worn with the suspense of the evening. She laughed at him mockingly.

"What an idiot you are!" she exclaimed. "You ought to be one of the happiest men in the world, and you look like a death's-head."

"The happiest man in the world," he repeated. "Beatrice, sometimes I think that there is only one thing in the world that makes for happiness."

"And what's that, booby?" she asked, with some of her old familiarity.

"A clear conscience."

She laid her hand upon his arm. "Look here, Philip," she said, "the one thing I determined when I threw up the sponge, was that whether the venture was a success or not I'd never waste a single moment in regrets. Things didn't turn out too brilliantly with me, as you know. But you—see what you've attained! Why, it's wonderful! Your play, the one thing you dreamed about, produced in one of the greatest cities in the world, and a packed house to listen to it, people applauding all the time.

"I didn't realize your success when we talked this evening. I am just beginning to understand. I've been reading some of these extracts from the newspapers. You, Morton Ware, the great dramatist, the coming man of letters. You've won, Philip. Can't you see that it's pulling cowardice to grumble at the price?"

Her Callousness

He, for his part, was wondering at her callousness, of which he was constantly discovering fresh evidences. The whole shock of her discovery seemed already, in these few hours, to have passed away.

"If you can forget—so soon," he muttered, "I suppose I ought to be able to."

She made a little grimace, but immediately he saw the cold tightening of her lips.

Aid to Convalescence

At the bedside of a patient three doctors were debating as to the best means to produce perspiration. The invalid overheard the discussion, and, after listening for a few minutes, turned his head toward the group and whispered with a dry chuckle, "Just send in your bill, gentlemen; that will bring it on at once!"

When a Girl Marries

Interesting Story of the Trials and Jealousies of a Bride

"BULLY for Jimmie—keeps good hours. Well, we'll call him at the office."

"Will you come here for lunch? I'd love to have you see the house," I said, half timorously, half joyfully, because that would give me a real excuse to call Jim—an excuse my pride couldn't reject.

"I'd love to, dear," replied Betty. "But I've a bit of shopping I must do. So you won't be hurt if the house waits for our return. And you will come along to the stores with me, won't you?"

"Of course," I replied. And then we arranged our meeting place.

It seemed to me that Fate was taking my day out of my hands.

After a morning of shopping Betty and I arrived at the hotel where we were to meet Terry at one.

"Terry's never late," commented Betty, after several minutes of waiting. "I'll wager he's waiting for Jim. Has your lord and master learned anything about promptness?"

"Jim doesn't keep me waiting," I replied.

Betty laughed and seached my face with friendly amusement.

"You should have heard how primly you said that, Anne. As if you dared a mere husband to keep you waiting. Jim's still a boy, you know, and has a boy's faults—tardiness, vanity, irresponsibility."

Not a Weakling

"You sound as if you were describing a weakling," I said bitterly, having just experienced a glimpse of how set and determined Jim could be.

"A weakling?" Betty laughed. "That's about the last thing I'd call Jim. I saw his bravery at the front, Anne. I've seen his stubbornness, too. And when I saw what a week 'lilac-lady' he'd married, I rejoiced. Jim has a lot of latent force and determination. If he'd married a fluffless creature or an absent feminist there would have been breakers away for the Jimmies."

At her very first word of tureen to watch Betty. I wondered if she had any hidden meaning—any suspicion that I had developed into a thinking woman and wasn't just the little lilac-princess of my early married days. But her gray eyes were smooth and serene. They hadn't even a hint of the sea-green jade-green I'd often seen in their depths. I sighed with relief.

"Jim's a regular man," I said lightly. "I suppose they are all alike in thinking themselves the lords of creation and in wanting women to cater to them."

Betty caught my hand in hers and turned me to face her. Her eyes searched mine until I felt myself crimsoning under her gaze.

"I'm glad you can blush and get fussed and uneasy," she said after a moment's scrutiny. "You sounded hard for a moment. Never let yourself get hard, Anne. Jim didn't marry you for your sturdy oak qualities. He fell in love with your sweetness and fragrance, little Lilac Lady. . . . Oh, here's Terry, and guess what he's with him?"

My heart gave a great jump. Jim! Jim was coming. Terry had brought him. I'd be very sweet, not flighty! Betty's advice, so lightly given, was worth taking. I closed my eyes tight for a second and opened them on a smiling world. Jim turned my head to greet Terry and his companion. But it wasn't Jim.

It was Anthony Norreys.

It was Anthony

It was Anthony Norreys who walked across the hotel lobby at Terry's side to join Betty and me.

And I had longed to see Jim. I waited for the peace and calm I always felt when Tony was near to come and drive away the disappointment that choked me when I saw it wasn't Jim. But I was so hurt I couldn't cheer up—even when Tony took my hand in his wiry, nervous left hand and said:

"You don't know what a joy it is to an old soldier like me to be with the three best pals in the world. It's as good as Spring sunshine and Summer roses, Anne, Betty, Terry! Jove! This is a holiday!"

"Nice Tony!" laughed Betty. "Don't you know it's just as important to her to be with you as it is to you to be with us?"

And on that happy, friendly note our luncheon party was started. After a while peace came to me. My bitter talk with Jim the night before and its cruel ending faded from my mind like bad dreams.

At the end of the lunch, Tony made a suggestion:

"Terry tells me your train doesn't go until 6, Betty. How about a spin out to the country in my car, and tea along the road? My afternoon's clear, but if you girls have other plans, and you tell me to run along, I won't act like a cry-baby about it."

"Splendid! That just suits me, and Anne daren't begrudge me these few hours, since I'm going away for four weeks," said Betty in a tone I thought it best not to deny.

"Say, Sister Anne, want to telephone Jimmie to join us?" queried Terry, and his words flicked me on the raw again.

Gay and Kittenish

"Oh, let me!" begged Betty, and I wondered if she had interpreted aright the crimson tide I felt rush to my cheeks at Terry's question.

"Quiet!" laughed Terry, and turned to Tony with beaming eyes. "She's so gay and skittish these days I can't hold her."

As plainly as if he had said it, I heard the "Bless her heart" with which Terry finished that sentence in his own mind. What a splendid fight these two were putting up for each other! Fighting together side by side.

We all went with Betty while she phoned. But she came out of the booth shaking her head sorrowfully:

"Poor Jimmie! That West person hasn't come back yet. Jim's afraid he isn't coming until tomorrow—that's the second of the month—and I'm sure all travelers ought to get back on the first as we intend to do next month."

"You'll be back the first!" cried Anthony Torreys boyishly. "Then we four must get together and have a bang-up celebration in honor of our reunion."

As his deep, clear voice rang out, a telephone booth back of us opened and out came Tom Mason—his face gray-white, his eyes snapping red sparks. He bowed curtly, but his head fell to demand my attention and I felt compelled to look after his retreating form. As he got to the door, he turned and glanced back at us—and there was something in his eyes that startled me.

"We'll have Jim and Virginia, too," declared Betty in a voice louder than I had ever before heard her use.

PLEAD FOR ERIN TOMORROW

Big Attendance Is Forecasted for Mass Meeting at Mechanics Hall

Reasons why the United States should recognise the Irish Republic will be advanced by speakers at a mass meeting to be held under the direction of the Commission on Irish Independence in Mechanics Hall tomorrow evening.

That there will be a record-breaking attendance at the meeting is evidenced by the eagerness throughout the city by people of all classes to hear Frank P. Walsh, one of the trio of Irish-American delegates to the peace conference; Harry P. Boland, T. D., of Ireland, and the Rev. Jonathan C. Day of New York, a Presbyterian minister. From 6 o'clock to 8 o'clock the 61st Infantry band will give a concert of Irish and American airs.

In Russell Hall, Deacon Building, South End, Tuesday evening, the members of the Carlow Association will listen to a report from President M. R. Kinsella on the Irish bond certificate drive.

John J. Foley is unopposed for re-election as head of the Central Council of Irish County Clubs. The election will be held at a meeting in Deacon Hall, South End, Tuesday night.

The degree staff of James E. Hayes Council, Knights of Columbus, will officiate tomorrow afternoon at the bestowal of the second degree of the order on a large class of candidates for Haverhill Council, No. 262, in that city.

Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 14, Ancient Order Hibernians, will arrange for a membership drive at a meeting to be held in Auxiliary Hall, Hibernian Building, Roxbury, Tuesday evening. Miss Elizabeth Dowd, a past State officer, will address the meeting.

Division No. 60, Ancient Order Hibernians, composed of newspaper workers, has started a canvass for new members in all departments of the Boston dailies. The division will confer the new members a reception in St. Rose Hall, Worcester street, South End, March 17.

Rev. Francis X. Kelly, staff chaplain of the 27th Division, appears as the production of the "Burning Question," an eight-act moving film showing the work of the Knights of Columbus in the recent war, at the High School of Practical Arts, Greenville street, Roxbury, tonight. The show is being staged under the direction of Rose Croix Council.

A meeting of all Irish societies will be held in the assembly room of the American House, Hanover street, tomorrow afternoon. Frank P. Walsh and John F. Harrigan, Massachusetts State chairman for the Irish bond certificate drive, will speak.

ALLIES DEMAND ONLY ACTUAL CRIMINALS

Paris, Feb. 14.—The new war criminal note which the allies have decided to send to Germany makes a distinction between actual and moral war offenders, and insists upon the extradition of the former only according to Charles Sauerwein, writing in Le Matin today. M. Sauerwein declares that this action is not to be regarded as a "pretext for the violation of other treaty clauses, but proof that the allies desire peace in Europe and tranquility in Germany."

MANY CHURCHES GIVE PAGEANT

"The Builders of the City of God" Has Presentation in Episcopal Parishes

The pageant, "The Builders of the City of God," will be given tomorrow in a number of parishes of the Episcopal church in Greater Boston and throughout the eastern part of the State as part of a nation-wide campaign.

When a demonstration performance was given at St. Paul's Cathedral two weeks ago, one of the leading parts, that of the "parish priest," was taken by Rev. Frederick W. Fitts, who will assume the same role tomorrow when the pageant will be presented at his own parish, that of St. John's Church, Roxbury, as part of the morning service. Rev. Edward Everett will be the "interpreter" and Jennette Cameron will have the part of "The Spirit of the Nation-Wide Campaign."

Miss Dorothy Parker, who took the part of the "Spirit" when the pageant was given in St. Paul's, will have this same part at the Church of Our Saviour, Longwood, tomorrow evening.

At Grace Church, Everett, of which Rev. John A. Furrer is rector, there will be two performances of the pageant tomorrow, one at 2:30 and one at 7 o'clock.

St. Cyprian's Episcopal Mission (colored) will stage the pageant at 5 o'clock tomorrow at the Church of the Ascension.

At Emmanuel Parish, Somerville, the pageant will take the place of the regular evening service.

At Trinity Church, Woburn, the pageant will be presented by the Sunday school at 11 o'clock.

At Trinity Church, Bridgewater, Miss Moffett of the State Normal School is in charge of the pageant and will produce it tomorrow evening.

At St. Stephen's Memorial Church, Lynn, the pageant will be put on tomorrow evening under the direction of Miss Helen Mower and the group of Fleur de Lis girls, of which Miss Mower is the head. Miss Jean Muir, who attended the Cathedral performance, has been the coach. The "interpreter" will be taken by Rev. Herbert L. Johnson, assistant minister, and Rev. William Appleton Lawrence, son of Bishop Lawrence, will have the part of "The Parish Priest."

DORCHESTER POSTS PLAN FIRST MEMORIAL

The Old Dorchester Post of the American Legion will hold its first memorial services on Sunday afternoon, February 22. Three posts of the Legion, Old Dorchester Post, All Dorchester Post and the Roberts Post have united to make these services a huge success. This will be the first memorial services held by any post of the American Legion in the United States. Lieutenant Bernard F. Carroll, chairman of the committee of arrangements, is working hard with the co-operation of the other posts of Dorchester to make these first services a fitting memorial for the boys who made the supreme sacrifice. Congressman James A. Gallivan will be the orator of the day.

The Valley of the Giants

By Peter B. Kyne

WITH a slight click it cleared the switch and slid out onto the Cardigan lateral, swiftly gathering speed. A quarter of a mile down the line Buck Ogilvy applied the brakes and eased her down to twenty miles per hour.

At the junction of the main line Buck backed briskly up into the Laguna Grande woods, and coupled to the two loaded flat-cars. The woods-gang scrambled aboard the flats, and the train pulled out of Sequoia. Forty minutes later they rumbled down Water street and slid to a grinding halt at the intersection of B street.

From the darkness of Cardigan's drying-yard, where they had been waiting, twenty picked men of the mill-crew now emerged, bearing lanterns and tools. Under Buck Ogilvy's direction the dirt promptly began to fly, while the woods-crew unloaded the rails and piled them close to the sidewalk.

Suddenly a voice, harsh and strident with passion, rose above the thud of the picks and the clang of metal.

"Who's in charge here, and what in blazes do you mean by cutting my tracks?"

Bryce turned in time to behold Colonel Seth Pennington leap from an automobile and advance upon Buck Ogilvy. Ogilvy held a lantern up to the Colonel's face and surveyed Pennington calmly.

"Colonel," he began with exasperating politeness, "I presume you are Colonel Pennington—my name is Buchanan P. Ogilvy, and I am in charge of these operations. I am the vice-president and general manager of the K. C. C. and I am engaged in the blithe task of making a jump-crossing of your rails. I had supposed I could accomplish this without your knowledge or consent, but now that you are here, that hope is dashed. Have a cigar." And he thrust a fragrant one under the Colonel's nose. Pennington struck it to the ground, and on the instant, half a dozen rough rascals emptied their shovels over him. He was deluged with dirt.

"Stand back, Colonel, stand back. If you please. You're in the way of the shovelers," Buck Ogilvy warned him soothingly.

Bryce Cardigan came over, and at sight of him Pennington choked with fury. "You—you—" he sputtered, unable to say more.

"I'm the N. C. O," Bryce replied. "Nice little fiction that of yours about the switch-engine being laid up in the shops and the Laurel Creek bridge being unsafe for this big mogul." He looked Pennington over with frank admiration. "You're certainly on the job, Colonel. I'll say that much for you. The man who plans to defeat you must jump far and fast, or his tail will be trod on."

"You've stolen my engine," Pennington almost screamed. "I'll have the law on you for grand larceny."

"Tut-tut! You don't know who stole your engine. For all you know, your own farmie-crew may have run it down here."

"I'll attend to you, sir," Pennington replied, and he turned to enter Mayor Poundstone's little flyver.

"Not tonight, at least," Bryce retorted gently. "Having gone this far, I would be a poor general to permit you to escape now with the news of your discovery. You'd be down here in an hour with a couple of hundred members of your mill-crew and give us the rush. You will oblige me, Colonel Pennington, by remaining exactly where you are until I give you permission to depart."

"And if I refuse——"

"Then I shall manhandle you, truss you up like a fowl in the tonneau of your car, and gag you."

To Bryce's infinite surprise the Colonel smiled. "Oh, very well!" he replied. "I guess you've got the bulge on me, young man. Do you mind if I sit in the warm cab of my own engine? I came away in such a hurry I quite forgot my overcoat."

"Not at all. I'll sit up there and keep you company."

Half an hour passed. An automobile came slowly up Water street and paused half a block away, evidently reconnoitering the situation. Instantly the Colonel thrust his head out of the cab window.

"Sexton!" he shouted. "Cardigan's cutting in a crossing. He's holding me here against my will. Get the mill-crew together and phone for Rondeau and his woods-crew. Send the switch-engine and a couple of flats up for them. Phone Sheriff Bell to tell him to have the chief of police——"

Bryce Cardigan's great hand closed over the Colonel's mouth, while down Water street a dark streak that was Buck Ogilvy sped like the wind. Another minute sufficed to climb in and make Pennington's manager a prisoner also. His was the late, however, for swinging his car and departed at full speed down Water street, leaving the disappointed Buck to retrace pants ing to the scene of operations.

Bryce Cardigan released his hold on Pennington's neck. "You win, Colonel," he announced. "No good can come of holding you here any longer. Into your car and on your way."

"Thank you, young man," the Colonel answered and there was a metallic ring in his voice. He looked at his watch in the glare of a torch. "Plenty of time," he murmured. "Curfew shall not ring tonight." Quite deliberately he climbed into the Mayor's late source of woe and breezed away.

PRICES CLIMB IN BOSTON

Large Gains Recorded for Many Exchange Issues; Curb Starts Strong

At the opening prices of Boston Stock Exchange issues were firm, but a large number of stocks were unchanged. The market improved during the morning, but gains did not average large, for awhile and early trading was narrow. Among the most active stocks were National Leather, United Shoe, Gray & Davis, Swift International and American Telephone. Among market incidents was the rally of Mexican Investments, it opened with a loss of 2¼, but had recovered it all before the close. New England Oils were strong. Eastern Steamship, Swift & Co., International Products, International Cement and Swift International declined at the end of the morning the market was decidedly strong and more active.

Stewart declined a point on one sale, and among stocks to reach fractions were New England Telephone, Nipissing, Helvetia, Highcourt and Utah Consolidated.

Early prices changes on the Boston Curb were narrow, but the market had a strong start. Among issues to advance at the opening were Arizona Extension, Albany Divide and Verde Mines, while Arizona Silver was off a small fraction. Boston and Montana and Hecla Divide were unchanged. Universal Silvers was traded in for the first time, opening at 75 cents.

France's Foreign Trade

The foreign trade of France is expanding. Exports, in francs, totalled 4,722,694,000 in 1918, and increased to 8,713,448,000 in 1919. Imports in 1918 totalled 22,302,384,000, and last year amounted to 29,778,519,000.

Cotton Consumption

The Census Bureau reports January cotton consumption in this country as 591,725 bales, compared with 511,355 in December, 1919, and 606,721 in January, 1919. Total consumption from August 1, 1919, to January 31, 1920, amounted to 3,349,205 bales, compared with 2,852,332 a year ago.

IT'S WHITE AND 90c

WORKINGMEN: What you lack is CO-OPERATION. Learn to co-operate and you will make the United States the land of Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness instead of a sweater for rents and shrunken dollars. HOW? By following the lead of NEW SAFETY PAPER, by putting your savings into new enterprises and factories that you own and operate, and by dividing the resulting profits among yourselves, instead of paying huge salaries to a few people who pay you what is left, 5% shrunken to one-half.

Big Business makes 100% to 500% on its original investments. You can do likewise by using the same discrimination. We will show you and treat you WHITE. We have been trailing and acting this plan for a year. Now comes the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH and O. K.'s the plan. See the January Metropolitan Magazine. Learn this plan of co-operation and you may make 30% the 1st year, 60% the 2d, and 100% the 3d.

Call at our office and see the DEMONSTRATION Saturday P. M. or evening.

The CATHOLIC CHURCH points out the way. New Safety Paper supplies the means. The rest is up to you. Get busy.

OILS LED THE N. Y. MARKET

Steels and Motors Also Strong While Several Rails Make Good Gains

By W. H. Ross

Financial Editor

Stocks were strong in New York at the close, prices being at the top level in late trading. Among strongest issues were during the forenoon were American Beach Magneto, American Woolen common, Crucible, Kelly Springfield, Keystone, U. S. Rubber, Mexican Petroleum, Middle States Oil, Texas Co. and Industrial Alcohol. At their highest they were showing from three to six points gains.

Among strongest rails were Northern Pacific, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific. They were up more than a point at their best. The 6 per cent. railroad rate holds over until November. In the foreign exchange market demand sterling advanced 2¼ cents to $3.43 in the morning.

Transactions in stocks for the day totalled 1,600,000 shares. Bond sales for the week was 5,137,200. Bond sales today amounted to $7,-000,000 and for the week to $46,-977,000.

HIGHER AT OPENING.

Prices were higher at the opening, short covering and buying based on some investment buying creating an early demand. The strength of the market in the last hour on Friday was a surprise to all elements, as it was said that no development chronicled in the news of the day appeared to warrant such a sudden shift. It was explained this morning that the market had been heavily oversold and that for technical reasons alone a rally was warranted. Initial gains varied from fractions to three points and subsequently a number of issues which began with moderate improvement increased advances. Marine issues were an exception, selling off fractionally at the outset. Marine preferred rallied almost immediately. Motors were especially strong at the opening with oils and steels next in order. Rails showed gains as a rule, but did not develop pronounced strength. General Motors, Middle States, Crucible and Republic led the upturn in their respective groups. Barring Utah, coppers showed small gains. Among strongest stocks were a few specialties.

THINK LIQUIDATION IS OVER.

At the end of an hour the market was still strong. A majority of issues were above their opening prices. Trading was active for a week-end session and sentiment among speculators appeared to be more cheerful than any time so far this month. In some quarters belief was expressed that liquidation was at last and that the price movement should now be upward, although there may be a period of indecision and a market is likely to mark time for a few days. The lower money rate for several days is a favorable sign, although it is largely due to a decrease in the demand for loans on margin accounts. The stock market has been quite thoroughly deflated, according to the evidence at hand. It is believed that by springtime Federal Reserve Bank statements will show a decided improvement in the monetary situation in all sections of the country.

Flaws Removed From War Risk Bureau

This is the third of a series of articles of unusual appeal to every ex-service man and woman and of great importance to every legion post. They should interest the beneficiaries, dependents, relatives and friends of soldiers, sailors and marines. The next article will appear Monday.

By CHARLES O. POWER.

First we will deal with war risk. In the articles in the Hearst papers referred to attention was called to certain provisions of law relative to compensation which were a disgrace to the country and which held the disabled men in such cheap esteem that they were doing more harm than good.

To enumerate a few: Two men might have practically the same physical disability and yet one would receive a higher disability rating than the other. That meant a badly disabilized man. It was recommended that the reasons for the difference in the percentages be explained and that is now being done. A better feeling is the result.

EXTRA ALLOWANCES.

While it was shown in the articles that a definite fixed schedule of compensation ratings was impossible it was suggested that there was no reason why there should not be a minimum basis for major physical injuries upon which might be imposed extra ratings allowance commensurate with the value of the vocational loss which each disabled man sustained. It now develops that such a system of ratings is being used and that the schedule is being continually improved and enlarged upon. It would have pleased many disabled men if they had been kindly told before discharge that their cases were to be weighed with science and justice.

Confining the cases of total and permanent disability which carried compensation of $100 a month and also granted insurance payments to men who lost both arms or both legs or both eyes, or who were permanently and helplessly bedridden, comprised a field that was altogether too narrow. That injustice was pointed out, and has been corrected.

The bureau is now deciding each case upon its merits, using experience and common sense as a guide. In order that justice may be done each individual, under the old rule, if a man had lost an arm and a leg on the same side, and was really much worse off that the man who had lost both feet, he was outside the special class, and could only receive $30 a month. The amount for so-called simple total disability. This was doubtless a too miserable a reward for the feat of public opinion. Now one hundred dollars a month was suggested as reasonable compensation for the simple totals, and Congress has since raised it to $80.

BROUGHT BIG CHANGE.

Under another old rule, which was explained in the articles in the Hearst papers, if a man went to work he compensation was reduced by the amount of his earnings or discontinued. It was the publication of this injustice and not criticism which quickly brought about a wonderful change. Now a man's compensation is not affected in the slightest degree by his earnings. It is also pointed out in those articles that Congress never intended that it should be, and that when the law was quickly accepted by the present director of the bureau when he went into office.

Disabled men wondered why they were obliged to have an examination by a private health doctor, inasmuch as they were thoroughly examined and given a rating by the army medical board. They had a suspicion that it was for the purpose of reducing their compensation. The new director desires to make it known that this second examination is not for the purpose of checking up and seeing if the discharge board overlooked anything that might be used in the man's favor.

This outline gives a few of the benefits made by the bureau. It was accepted in the real spirit by the new director of the Bureau, Colonel R. E. Woodson, who has assumed office a few days after the publication of these articles.

"They were an inspiration to me," he says, "and they spurred me to a keener study of conditions. I made recommendations along similar lines. I have in my level best to secure more liberal legislation for compensation and insurance and to simplify handicaps and if I think there may be as little delay and red-tape as possible."

JONES DESERVES CREDIT.

Investigation proves this statement to be absolutely true and it must be said that Jones deserves a great deal of credit for his desire to have the bureau render the quickest and most generous service to those it was established to serve and for his co-operation with the American Legion. It is proper to say this now, but I am afraid I was not very polite to Director Jones when I called upon him the first time.

Senator Smoot is arguing for his bill for the dismemberment of the Bureau and spreading its essential parts to the four corners of Washington, made the statement that Director Jones was probably a fine fellow and an mean meant well, but lacked experience and could not do as well qualified to handle the complex problems growing out of war risk. I told the senator that Jones seemed to impressed me and I would like to take a ground around the place and see what was going on before I received any information from him. This was agreeable to him and for two days I did a lot of snooping, looking wise and asking questions of the office employes, some wise and some otherwise.

I mean the employes, for the question was not answered.

I learned a great deal about the distinction and the difference between a building-up force and an operating force and that, in his steady reductions of the number of employes, the director had been dealing with the building-up force, and that, while smarting there was a force of about 17,000. In about four months he had lowered it to about 11,000. Those who are working out his orders to bring the forces to a strictly operating basis as soon as possible without adversely affecting practical efficiency, assured me the total would be less than 7,000 by the first of July. Which is an even smaller personnel than Smoot has recommended for this theoretical efficiency plan which calls for the amputation of the head, arms and legs from the body of war risk insurance and compensation service. I have always thought Smoot a pretty smart man, but this knowledge of actual working conditions inclined me to believe he is not so smart as I thought he was, particularly about the ability of Director Jones as an executive.

JONES IS HARD WORKER.

Several men in the Bureau told me Colonel Jones worked sixteen hours a day whether in Washington or on the road. Another said one night at about 11 o'clock and, sure enough, he was there. And so I telegraphed again the next morning at 2 and he was on deck. Three nights later I called about 10 and he was on the job. I saw him the next morning at 9:30 in his office and he had been there for some little time when I arrived.

The second night I called him on the long distance from Boston between 2 and 3 and got him. It certainly would seem that he has been doing his utmost to qualify as an expert on the job to make up for that lack of experience which Senator Smoot talks about. I am beginning to believe that one of the top-notchers in the Bureau at right in his estimate of Jones when he said: "He is just the right man for the place. A good experience as a business man, having been for years a successful organizer, handling men, and also a fighting courtesy and patience and an appreciation of the value of a desire to deal with the men and women who served and sacrificed.

WOUNDED SURPRISED.

Another incident showing Jones' on-the-job-every-minute style impressed me very much. I trailed half a dozen wounded men to his office. One had lost a leg and an eye. Another had lost a leg, one arm was stiff and his face was badly disfigured. Another was so feeble he seemed all shot to pieces. Another had a leg and a foot gone and carried a badly crippled arm. All together hobbled along on one weak leg with the aid of crutches. They were a surprised lot when they found they had been a call from Jones in person as permanently and totally disabled men entitled to back pay for back payments ranging from $400 to $800 and were told they would receive it within a month or so long as they live besides compensation of $100 a month after discharge.

Later I learned Director Jones had appointed a committee to look over every case entitled to similar justice under the new conception of total and permanent disability. There is a most significant thing and a rather remarkable indication of the care and precision of this War Risk Bureau under the direction of this man Jones: The Record will have cleared the way by before last Christmas. It elevated the basis of monthly compensation from $20 to $30 a month. Under this provision something like $15,000 more was entitled to back pay for varying amounts. Every check had been mailed by Christmas. Perhaps this Jones is a bigger man than Smoot since he is to be.
